NAZI, ITALIAN TROOPS ON MOVE

New Tension Reported in Egypt Desert

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN

CAIRO, Aug. 26.—(BUP)—Tension in the western desert was reported growing today with movement of German armored forces in the southern sector noted by British observers.

British sources believed that at any moment Marshal Erwin Rommel may launch a new offensive against the British desert lines.

In the northern area of the front observers spotted Italian troops concentrating and apparently carrying out similar tactical preparations to those which occurred before the last Axis push started.

Air action was reported increasing steadily with German night air attacks in the battle area having resumed.

One Junkers 88 was shot down by a New Zealand pilot, bringing the bag of his squadron to 288, of which 163 have been shot down in the Middle East.

The communique reported that long range British fighters attacked an eastbound Nazi truck convoy along the Salum-Matruh road.

Dieppe Vets Eager to Get Back at Nazis

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Canadian fighting men, back from their first brush with the enemy at Dieppe, are just waiting to get another crack at him, Maj.-Gen. H. F. G. Letson, adjutant-general, said at a press conference today.

Gen. Letson returned to Ottawa by air from England last night after spending last Saturday and Sunday chatting with the wounded men from the Dieppe battle. He visited every one in the four hospitals which contain the bulk of the men who came back from the battle of Dieppe with wounds.

"Two things were outstanding in the impressions I got from talking with the men," he said.

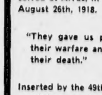

"First, their spirits were right up. Their morale is high. They are only waiting to get another crack at him.

"Secondly, they kept asking me, 'How is my officer?' They thought they had the most wonderful officers in the world. Time after time I was told they would not have got anywhere if it hadn't been for their officers."

The men were in excellent physical condition to start with, said Gen. Letson. This was evidenced by the fact that many who were badly wounded were able to swim out to boats and get aboard.

Egypt to Continue Help Democracies

CAIRO, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Premier Nahas Pasha, broadcasting today on the sixth anniversary of the signing of the Anglo-Egyptian treaty, said "the cause of the democracies is Egypt's cause. We have given and shall continue to give the democracies all the aid in our power."

In ever living memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 49th Battalion (Edmonton Regiment) who were killed in action, or died of wounds received at Arras, in France, on August 26th, 1918.

"They gave us peace by their warfare and life by their death."

Million Nazi Troops Close On Stalingrad

MOSCOW, Aug. 26. — (AP) — The Russians announced tonight that a Red army counter - offensive west and northwest of Moscow had driven the Germans back from 35 to 50 miles.

By The Canadian Press

Hitler's legions pressed harder on the defenders of Stalingrad today, forcing the Red army back closer to the outskirts of that great Volga steel city.

Soviet dispatches indicated the 1,000,000-man invasion army was only a few miles from the city which bears the name of the Russian premier.

German field headquarters asserted a great fire was burning in Stalingrad and declared Nazi planes were pounding the city day and night with high-explosive and incendiary bombs.

CLAIM ASSAULT NEAR

A broadcast over the Nazi-dominated Vichy radio claimed the Germans had consolidated their positions in the 40-mile corridor between the Don and the Volga for a climactic frontal assault on the metropolis.

Other Nazi columns striking from the southwest were less than 25 miles below Stalingrad, the broadcast asserted.

For the first time, Red Army headquarters acknowledged Stalingrad itself had become a battle sector, and dispatches to Red Star said German spearheads knifing between two Soviet defence forces had "reached a district just northwest of Stalingrad."

As the Germans poured division after division of tanks across the Don River, Soviet armored forces rumbled out to challenge Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock's gravest threat to the key "City of Stayin" with the Red Army lines reformed behind the screening tanks.

NAZIS SURGE AHEAD

Front-line dispatches said the Russians had cut sharply into a flank of the German salient east of the Don, but the Nazis held the corridor open and continued to surge forward.

One report said Russian tanks had checked the first waves of German panzers in a heavy battle still progressing on the flat countryside northwest of Stalingrad.

But the situation was admittedly critical, with the Germans throwing in 100 divisions into an all-out attempt to capture the Volga stronghold and exploiting the familiar Nazi tactic of dropping parachute troops and airborne motorcyclists behind the lines.

In the Caucasus, bitter fighting continued as the Germans won new ground below Krasnodar; in a drive to the Black Sea naval base at Novorossisk, but met stiffening resistance in the mountains of the central Caucasus.

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

Allied fighting equipment is beginning to make its weight felt in the war and the enemy may be due for some unpleasant surprises when more of our military developments are unveiled in action.

A hint of this was given in London today by Brig. Gen. G. M. Barnes, head of the design division of the U.S. war department, who said that "we have many surprises." As assistant chief of ordnance of the American army he declared that orders of production already is sufficient

Sub Menace Not Licked

Small Chasers Could Be Used

The present lull in submarine attacks on Allied shipping is but temporary and additional defence weapons still are badly needed to meet the Axis undersea menace, the former chief of staff of the U.S. fleet asserts in the following dispatch. He advocates the construction of hundreds of small, fast anti-submarine chasers.—EDITOR.

British United Press Naval Analyst

Ship sinkings by enemy submarines off the United States coast have decreased recently to the lowest point in months, but it would be premature, in my judgment, to assert that the U-boat menace has been removed.

The present period merely is a lull and the enemy is likely soon to be at us with new fury. And

Roosevelt Sends Note of Sympathy On Death of Duke

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP)—President Roosevelt sent a message of condolence today over the death of the Duke of Kent to the King, Queen Mother Mary and the Duchess of Kent. The text of the message was not released by the White House.

IN NORTH SCOTLAND

Youngest Brother of King Killed on Active Service

LONDON, Aug. 26—(CP)—All British, where the previous message "killed on active service" has darkened countless households, offered understanding sympathy today to the Royal family bereaved by the death of the Duke of Kent, the King's youngest brother, on a wartime mission.

The Duke, fifth in succession to the throne, died in the line of duty yesterday when the Sunderland flying boat which was taking him to Iceland for the Royal Air Force crashed in northern Scotland.

Circumstances surrounding the crash of the four-engined, 20-ton flying boat were held in strict secrecy but an authoritative source said it was in no way due to enemy action.

The plane was believed to have crashed against a mountain.

The Lord Chamberlain announced that by command of the King, the court would remain in mourning four weeks.

14 PERSONS KILLED

Fourteen of the 15 persons in the plane were killed and their bodies recovered. The only survivor was the rear gunner.

Among those in the plane was Michael Strutt, the Duke's aide and son of Lord Belper. He is survived by his widow, the former Arielle Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Washington Fraser of Detroit.

The body of the Duke, first member of the Royal family killed in an airplane, was to be brought to London later.

An air ministry investigation has been launched into the crash, which occurred in desolate country about 60 miles from the takeoff. Press reports said it was in an area where other planes have been wrecked. Semi-official sources emphasized that the pilot was one of the most capable in the R.A.F.

BEGAN AS NAVAL CADET

The 39-year-old youngest son of Queen Mary and the late King George V was the most air-minded of all the Royal family.

His career in Britain's service began as a naval cadet, at his father's choice, before he was 14. But his interest turned to aviation and he served devotedly with the R.A.F.

One of his last official acts was to visit an R.C.A.F. reception cen-

Chinese Army Attacks Vital Airport City

By GEORGE WANG

CHUNGKING, Aug. 26—(BUP)—Chinese forces are attacking the walls of Chuhsien, important airport centre on Chekiang province and already have captured several strategic points around the city, a Chinese army communique said today.

Chinese attacks have been particularly heavy in the southern and western suburbs of the ancient town, which the Japanese captured last spring when they made their drive south from Hangchow to clear the Chinese from coastal areas that could be used by the Allies as bases for direct bombing attacks on Tokyo.

Chuhsien, Kinhwa and Lishui were the three most important air fields and the enemy took all of them. But now the Chinese have driven the invaders from 15 county seats in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces and are besieging both Chuhsien and Lishui.

Chuhsien is on the Hangchow-Nanchang railway and its capture would represent further progress in clearing the Japanese from that route to the coast. The height of their drive the Japanese held all but about 22 miles of the rail line, but today they have been cleared from a stretch of approximately 135 miles, a military spokesman said.

Sea Supremacy Is Finally Lost By Japanese

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(BUP)—The London Star reported from Sydney today that reports from the Solomon Islands battle "show very clearly that Japan has finally lost naval supremacy in the southwest Pacific."

The Star reported that it could be assumed that the main fleets of both the United States and Japan are massing for a decisive showdown in the Solomons area.

The battle, it suggested, may be "so big that the future may show it to have been another Jutland."

The Star asserted that Allied dive bombers and torpedo bombers are playing an important role in the offensive against the Japanese losses thus far indicate they no longer will be able to carry out a decisive challenge to the Allied supply lines to Australia and New Zealand.

"The Japanese," said the Star, "are still able to get through small reinforcements but any ambitious large-scale counter-invasion appears to have failed."

Several Names Mentioned For Election Race

With dates of the nominating conventions for the Sept. 22 provincial by-election having been fixed by the Social Credit and Liberal Parties, there was speculation here Wednesday as to the possible choice of candidates to contest the seat in the legislature left vacant by the death of D. M. Duggan, M.L.A., Independent, Edmonton.

The name of Maj. Nelles V. Buchanan, M.C., past president of the Edmonton Provincial Liberal Association and well-known Edmonton barrister, is being rumored as a possible Liberal candidate. Other names mentioned are S. H. Grant, K.C., secretary of the association, and S. C. S. Kerr, K.C., a city barrister.

Maj. Buchanan commands the 61st (Reserve) Field Battery, R.C.A., and is a veteran of the First Great War in which he was wounded and received the M.C. He served with the 38th Battery of Regina and the 20th of Lethbridge.

In 1935 he was defeated when he contested the Lac-Ste. Anne seat as a Liberal candidate.

A possible Social Credit candidate being mentioned is J. B. Gillies. A prominent member of the party, he was a West Edmonton candidate on the New Democracy (Social Credit) ticket in the 1940 general election.

The Social Credit Party will nominate Sept. 3 and a panel of at least four nominees will be chosen from which the advisory committee will later select a candidate. It is expected the panel will include the names of John Guild, president of the Edmonton Constituency Social Credit Association, and Rev. F. W. Williams, a member of the executive.

The Liberal nominating convention will be held Sept. 3.

Canadians Hit Nazi Shipping In Night Raid

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The Demon Squadron of the R.C.A.F. bombed and damaged two enemy ships in a moonlight attack on a convoy off the Frisian Islands last night.

Wing Cmdr. A. C. Brown of Winnipeg led the attack against the convoy, which consisted of four supply ships and five anti-aircraft vessels. The raid was executed in the face of intense flak from the escort ships and opposition of night fighters, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced.

As Brown swept down to bomb one of the ships, he saw a large column of smoke nearly 500 feet high pouring from a boat which had been attacked a few minutes earlier by P/O. Gord Walsh of Victoria, Alter Brown's attack another column of smoke rose from the convay.

Walsh's navigator, P/O. K. S. Goodman of Edmonton, and one of that plane's bombs landed aft on a

F.D.R. Schedules Three Addresses

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP)—President Roosevelt today scheduled three major radio addresses, one of which, on Sept. 3, will be directed to the youth of the entire world.

A speech on Aug. 31 will be made at the dedication of the new navy medical centre in suburban Bethesda, Md. on the 100th anniversary of the founding of the navy's bureau of medicine and surgery.

A forthcoming presidential speech centering on the problem of spiraling living costs and inflation in the United States probably will be on Labor Day. Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday he expected on, before or after Labor Day to send congress a message and make a radio address to the country on a plan now being evolved to combat inflation.

The Sept. 3 speech will take place at 10.20 p.m., M.D.T., and the immediate audience will be an assembly of the International Students' Service here, including students from all the United Nations.

Greece Sends Thanks

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The department of external affairs announced yesterday that Prime Minister Mackenzie King had received a telegram from Spyros Skouras, president of the Greek War Relief Association, thanking the Canadian government for providing mercy ships with wheat for Greece.

By The Canadian Press

Damaging of six more Japanese ships in the great sea and air battle for the Solomon Islands was announced by the United States navy in a communique which said that the results of the fight to date "are encouraging".

The ships reported today to have been successfully attacked by American aircraft were two destroyers and four miscellaneous vessels. One of the destroyers was damaged by U.S. dive bombers on the night of Aug. 23-24, when the Japanese destroyer force was attempting to shell Guadalcanal island.

The other destroyer and the four miscellaneous ships were "left burning" after marine and naval aircraft had blasted an enemy force of transports, cruisers and destroyers approaching Guadalcanal from the northward on Aug. 24.

ABANDON TRANSPORT

In addition to these vessels, the navy had reported on this particular action yesterday that one cruiser had been left burning fiercely and a transport had been hit. Today, the transport was reported to have been abandoned "as the enemy force withdrew" from the Guadalcanal island area.

The list of Jap ships reported today as damaged raised to more than a dozen the enemy vessels damaged in the new thrust the Japanese undertook, starting last week-end, to drive United States Marines out of the Tulagi area of the Solomons and regain that vital sector for future attacks on the supply line to Australia.

"It is too early," the navy communique said, "to estimate the outcome of the battle' at sea being fought off the Solomon Islands, but reports to date reveal that our forces at Guadalcanal are holding their positions in the face of strong enemy thrusts and in each action have inflicted heavy damage on the attacking Japanese forces."

OTHER ACTIONS

The wording of the navy's official announcement indicated the air and naval operations in the Solomons area were still in progress,

Secret Arms Will Open Up Eyes of Nazis

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Brig.-Gen. G. M. Barnes, head of the United States army ordnance division, said today the British and Americans both are producing a secret weapon which will prove a great surprise" to the Germans.

Speaking after a tour of British munitions factories, he declared United States and British armament production is sufficient both in quality and quantity for "the support of a full-sized army in any enterprise."

Gen. Barnes said some of the new British weapons now in production are "real eye-openers."

The General, 56, is chief of the U.S. war department design section and an expert on the design and manufacture of heavy ordnance, particularly anti-aircraft guns. He arrived in London recently at the head of a technical mission to work with the British authorities in correlating Allied fighting materiel.

He pointed out the nature of his work, concerned chiefly with developing advanced types of munitions, must be secret, but declared neither the British nor Americans had to concede "any superiority to the Germans in qualitative weapons."

The type of the new secret weapon was not hinted.

"It is no longer a question of ordnance production as far as supplying a vast army is concerned," he said.

He was quick to point out, however that the transportation of weapons from the United States to Britain was not in his field, and said he could not comment on the shipping situation.

Ban is Lifted on "Daily Worker"

LONDON, Aug. 26—(CP)—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison today raised the ban on the Daily Worker.

The Communist paper's publication was forbidden in January, 1941, on the ground that it had printed stories designed to foment opposition to Britian's war effort.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made to have the ban lifted after the German invasion of Russia. Last May 28 the British Labor Party conference by a close vote urged the government to permit the paper's resumption.

Canada Board Of Information On War Set Up

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today announced the creation of a publicity directing body to be known as the Wartime Information Board with Charles Vining, Montreal newspaper executive, as chairman.

The vice-chairman will be Hon. F. Phillipe Brais, K.C., Montreal. Other members of the board will be announced shortly, as well as the directing heads for publicity in the United States and elsewhere, the Prime Minister announced.

Creation of the board was recommended in the report made to the government recently by Mr. Vining on Canadian information distribution in the United States, the Prime Minister said.

The board will be "related directly to the war committee of the cabinet and responsible to the Prime Minister." It will "assist in distribution of Canadian war news and information in Canada as well as in the United States and other countries."

Headquarters will be in Ottawa but offices will be opened in New York, Washington "and in such other centres as may be found advisable."

Some Canadians Missing in Raid Turned Up Later

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Canadian military headquarters said last night that some men who participated in the Dieppe raid had been posted missing in early casualty lists and later reported safe because a number of Canadians got separated from their units in the re-embarkation and trickled back to their camps after the return of the main raiding party.

Headquarters suggested also that some erroneous reports may have been due to the unavoidable delays before units could be advised of wounded men who were taken to casualty clearing stations from debarkation points in England.

Canada Mourns Death of Duke: Recall Visits

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Official Canada and the man-on-the-street were saddened last night by news of the death in an air crash of the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of the King, who visited the Dominion a year ago.

It was last summer that the popular Duke came to Canada paying an official visit to Ottawa and touring establishments of the Empire Commonwealth Air Training plan.

FLEW ATLANTIC

The 39-year-old Duke was the first member of the British Royal family to fly the Atlantic ocean. He was flown from Britain to Canada in a Liberator bomber.

At the end of his six-weeks' visit to the Dominion, in which he was flown from coast to coast visiting training establishments and meeting men from many parts of the Commonwealth training for the task of dealing with the Axis in the skies, the Duke of Kent flew back across the Atlantic to Britain.

Near the end of his tour of air training schools the Duke went to Montreal. He was there from Aug. 28 to 30.

He started to fly to Quebec city, en route to Murray Bay, but the plane was forced down at Cap de la Madeleine by thick weather. His Royal Highness reviewed the air school there and then boarded a regular passenger train for Quebec. He sat with an aide in a seat in a day coach while passengers crowded around to talk with him.

At Quebec, the Duke ducked out of his hotel in the evening and went, unrecognized, in a movie.

Next day he drove himself to Murray Bay, travelling so fast that the motorcycle escort that met him halfway had to follow him because it couldn't catch up.

The Royal visitor rested two days at Murray Bay before proceeding to the Maritimes near the end of his tour.

ARRIVED IN OTTAWA

The Duke arrived in Ottawa on his Canadian visit July 29 of last year, after a nine-hour flight which was described as "uneventful."

He stayed at Government House as the guest of the Earl of Athlone, Canada's governor-general, and the Countess of Athlone, during his visit in the capital.

The visit was without formality, belying the war-time background against which it took place.

While in Ottawa, the Duke of Kent inspected the headquarters offices of the R.C.A.F. and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, saw airmen going through their paces at Rockliffe and Uplands airfields, held a press conference, enjoyed a picnic with a party from Government House in the Gatineau Valley country north of Ottawa, and flew for brief visits to the air station at Trenton, Ont., and to Camp Borden, Ont.

FLEW WESTWARDS

From Ottawa he flew west to Winnipeg and then on through the prairies and to the Pacific Coast before returning eastward. Before he returned to Britain, the Duke also visited President Roosevelt at the President's home in Hyde Park, N.Y.

Italy Admits Loss Another Submarine

ROME (From Italian Broadcasts), Aug. 26.—(AP)—The Italian high command asserted today that German fighter planes beat off a British bombing attack on an Italian convoy in the Mediterranean, but acknowledged an Italian submarine had failed to return to its base.

(This was the second day the Italian communique told of British aerial attacks on Italian Mediterranean convoys, possibly indicating persistent Axis efforts to strengthen Field Marshal Rommel's North Africa forces despite steady British attack.)

ON WAR MISSION
Duke Of Kent Killed In Flying Boat Crash

tre last week with the Canadian air minister, Hon. C. G. Power. In 1941 he made an extended tour by air of the ever-growing Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada.

He bore the air title of Air Commodore and was attached to the staff of the inspector-general of the R.A.F. The names of his companions on the fatal flight were not announced immediately.

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED

His death was announced in a brief communique just before midnight. It said:

The Air Ministry deeply regrets to announce that Air Commodore His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent was killed on active service this afternoon when a Sunderland flying boat crashed in north Scotland. His Royal Highness, who was attached to the staff of the inspector-general of the Royal Air Force, was proceeding to Iceland on duty. All the crew of the flying boat lost their lives."

The marriage of the Duke of Kent to beautiful Princess Marina of Greece in 1934 was one of the most resplendent Royal occasions of the century. They had three children, Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4 and bears also the name of Franklin Delano President Roosevelt, one of his godfathers.

As soon as the news of Kent's death was telephoned to King George and Queen Elizabeth at one of their summer residences, the King sent a special messenger to break it to the Duchess at her simple Buckinghamshire house. The Coppins, and arranged for other members of the Royal family to go there to console her.

The news reached the Queen Mother somewhere in the west of England and the Duke's oldest brother, the Duke of Windsor, in the Bahamas.

SYMPATHY MESSAGES

Messages from all corners of the world flowed into London. Editorials expressed the death as proof that Britain, from her highest family to her most humble, was in the war to the finish.

"He would not have wished for a better epitaph than that so concisely written for him in the air ministry communique, 'Killed on active service,' said the Daily Sketch.

"This war has left no family unscathed," said the Daily Express. "Homes of the poor have been bombed. Buckingham Palace, too. The mothers and wives who have already lost their menfolk on active service will personally share the grief of the Royal Family."

Because of the wartime necessity for secrecy concerning the movements of the Royal Family, the funeral is expected to be private.

PRINCE WAS KILLED IN FIRST GREAT WAR

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The last immediate member of the Royal Family killed on active service was Prince Maurice Victor Donald of Battenburg, grandson of Queen Victoria and a second cousin of the Duke of Kent, killed in Scotland yesterday.

Prince Maurice was killed Oct. 27, 1914. He was a lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps.

At first it was believed a century had elapsed since a member of the Royal Family had been killed on active service, but the Buckingham Palace press office turned up the case of Prince Maurice after a check of the records.

Gang Killing Staged Under Double Cover

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Gangland guns found two unwitting allies last night when under the double cover of a city-wide blackout and a lunar eclipse they spurted death from a speeding automobile that escaped in the confusion of darkness and wailing police sirens.

Four bullets fired from the car felled Salvatore Maggio, 26-year-old suit presser, as he stood near his parked automobile on a Brooklyn street at 9:23 p.m.—just two minutes before an army-ordered air raid alert set sirens await.

Police cars were shrilling the warning for the surprise raid alert and when they received the alarm for the murder car, while at 9:01 p.m. the earth's shadow had begun blotting out the moon, almost as if in conspiracy with the slayers.

With pedestrians running for shelter, and both man-made and heavenly light blanking out rapidly, police missed the killers' sedan.

medium-sized ship. Their plane, a Hudson bomber, was attacked by a Nazi night fighter as it recrossed the convoy to estimate the damage. When it returned to its base, Pilot-Gunner Sgt. W. Wright, of Kenton, Man., spotted a six-inch tear in the front of his bomber, which certainly wasn't there when we took off."

Single planes of the bomber command also made targets in western Germany and Holland by daylight yesterday, the air ministry announced today.

NAZIS HIT ENGLAND

German airmen caused some property damage and a number of casualties at a south coast town today in a raid that cost them two Focke-Wulf 190's.

British fighters also made another cross-channel foray in daylight.

The German radio reported that Great Yarmouth and Ipswich, also in southeast England, had been bombed last night.

A small number of casualties and little damage were reported caused during the night by German bombers which flew over East Anglia and bombed a few places near the coast.

The Nazis pelted the countryside with incendiaries, but quick action by rural fire guards saved crops ripening in the fields. Only a few small blazes resulted.

Churchill to Make Report in 2 Weeks

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Political circles said last night that Prime Minister Churchill would give his first public report on his mission to Moscow and Cairo to the House of Commons in about two weeks.

The Prime Minister is not likely to give detailed information about his conferences, these circles said, but would probably review the war situation.

The News Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent said "it is rumored major changes in the whole organization and character of Britain's supreme war direction may follow Churchill's return."

Appoint New Chief For Infantry Unit In Diepppe Battle

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 26.—(CP)—Lt.-Col. James J. Hurley has been appointed commanding officer of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, the Hamilton, Ont., unit which was in the forefront of the commando raid on Dieppe, it was learned yesterday. He succeeds Lt.-Col. R. R. Labatt, who led the battalion in the raid and has since been reported missing.

to support a full sized army, in the field in Europe.

Gen. Barnes denied any German superiority in equipment and incidentally added that Britain also has many "surprises" which he termed "real eye-openers."

PLANES IMPROVED

One of the first surprises the enemy got was the performance of the Flying Fortresses in action over Europe. These planes had been criticized as inferior to British bombers, presumably on the basis of British tests made with the first models sent over last year.

Since then, the Fortresses have been improved radically and when they went into action last week, manned by American crews, they showed up well. Much had been made of the prowess of the new German Focke-Wulf 190 fighter, but when some of the Fortresses were attacked by a swarm of Focke-Wulfs over the North Sea, the bombers shot down six of them and returned to base without loss.

Similarly in the Pacific, the new Japanese zero fighters were hailed as superior to Allied planes, but in China and over the south Pacific they have been bested repeatedly by Allied fliers and have come out on the short end in nearly every encounter.

NEW TYPES READY

It is true that American airmen in Europe have been using a great many British Spitfires, but that is probably because American fighters have not yet arrived in sufficient quantity, owing partly to the shipping bottleneck. The U.S. likewise has one or two new types which have not yet been seen in action and which may prove superior to anything the enemy has.

In Europe, the middle east, the Orient and elsewhere Allied planes already have proved their worth. Allied tanks, as for instance in the North African desert, where they have been a potent factor in action against Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces.

In China the air force is being expanded rapidly and more and more Chinese are being trained for the air offensive against Japan. Current Chinese successes in Chekiang province, if they continue, give reason to hope that before long they will be in possession of important air bases from which Tokyo and other Japanese centres can be bombed.

Airman is Killed In Auto Accident

CALGARY, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Cpl. H. J. Manson of Winnipeg, a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, was killed, and his wife and another airman injured when the automobile in which they were riding was involved in an accident on a bridge near here today.

Mrs. Eileen Manson was taken to hospital with a fractured right thigh and right ankle.

The name of the injured airman was not divulged. The men were from No. 3 Service Flying Training School here.

A third airman was scheduled to appear in court on a manslaughter charge in connection with the accident. His name was not released.

Six More Jap Ships Are Hit Off Solomons

and strongly suggested that there were still other vital actions to be heard from.

Yesterday it was reported that U.S. naval and air forces had engaged an enemy force of aircraft carriers, battleships and other war vessels approaching the southeast Solomon Islands from the northeast and so far as could be determined, nothing else has been communique gave any detail on that action.

Locked in sea and air engagements which may possibly determine naval supremacy of the Pacific, American forces inflicted severe damage on enemy warships and planes in the southeastern group of the Solomons while aboard the ships and planes from Australia headquarters smashed at an eastbound Japanese convoy.

The entire picture of the spreading conflict was far from complete but scattered reports from the navy here and from Australia headquarters made it clear Japan was risking a heavy portion of its fleet in a desperate effort to dislodge American marines from their hard-won positions in the Solomons.

DESTROY GUNBOAT

The counter-attack, fully expected by the United States navy, already has brought bombing or torpedoing of more than half a dozen Japanese ships in the Solomons plus the strafing of two transports and destruction of a gunboat off southeastern New Guinea.

The damaged vessels included one large and one small aircraft carrier. Only eight carriers were known to have been part of the enemy fleet before the war, although others may have been added secretly. Six Japanese warriers were sunk in previous actions, including four in the Midway battle, one probably damaged, and three others damaged there and off the Aleutian islands.

Additional punishment in the Solomons battle was inflicted by Allied carrier-based planes on a Japanese battleship and several cruisers. Aircraft left another enemy cruiser and transport in flames.

Thus far there have been no reports on the extent of American losses beyond the minor damage suffered at the opening of the conflict on Aug. 22, when 21 Japanese planes were listed as destroyed in an attack on Guadalcanal island.

Approximately 150 miles west of the convoy action, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported destruction of 13 grounded Japanese planes and silencing of an anti-aircraft battery in daylight attacks on Buna, on the southeastern New Guinea mainland.

Southward, Allied fighters destroyed several beached Japanese barges and supplies, and at Japan's large New Britain bases at Rabaul and Gasmata, northwest of the Solomons, eight tons of explosives were dropped by bombers.

New York Paper Pays Tribute in Death of Duke

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The New York Times, commenting editorially today on the Duke of Kent's death, said "everywhere and whatever there are men of good will there will be sorrow mingled with a flair of feeling for the British royal family. It was in their tradition that Prince George Edward Alexander Edmund gave his life."

"They have all been under fire, some in two wars, some in the bombing of Britain, and they have never failed of courage," said the editorial.

"Let the wild pipes of Scotland sound the first lament. It will be a call heard fiercely in all of Britain and across the seas."

10,000 Homeless

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Almost the entire population of Nazca, a city of 10,000 persons 325 miles south of Lima, was living in streets and fields today as a result of Monday night's earthquake, persons arriving from the stricken city said.

Labor Holds Key Position In War, Peace

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Thomas Lyons, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, addressing the 58th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada today said that without Labor's active and private participation in solving problems of the post-war world "all efforts towards a genuine lasting peace are doomed to failure."

The speech was recorded by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and will be relayed over its national network at 8.30 p.m. C.D.T., tonight.

Mr. Lyons, fraternal delegate of the American Federation of Labor to the convention, said unionism is the principle of combination for unity of purpose and action. "It does not demand of its followers that they must all think alike . . . but it does call for a spirit of cohesion on all fundamental principles. . . .

DEMOCRACY'S PRINCIPLES

"The principles of trade unionism are the same as those of democracy —the right of free men to organize, to associate with their fellow-men in action for the common good, to speak freely and without fear, and to act according to their own conscience.

"We must face the grim reality that we are fighting those who have nothing to lose but their chains." he added. "For years they have concentrated on preparing for this fight. It is easy to say that if they had spent on production what they have spent on destruction or intrigue, in arming Nazidom, they could have attained peace and prosperity. . . . But they did not want peace and prosperity. They wanted what every other aggster has wanted from the beginning of time—loot."

"The hope of Labor lies in the opportunity for freedom," he said. "A victory for Germany, for the Axis powers, would mean a Pan-German domination including all Europe and Asia and Africa and exercising a world balance of power which Germany will seek to extend by force into complete world control."

LABOR BOARD HELPS

He told of the formation of the National War Labor Board in the United States following that country's entry into the war and said that "while it has not functioned as efficiently as we should wish . . . nevertheless it has rendered a great service to the nation and to the workers."

Turning to production, he said soldiers, sailors and airmen are helpless if the producers do not do their part. "Let us remind you that disregard production indispensable to preventing unnecessary slaughter of fellow men. . . .

"Give workers a decent place to live in, protect them against conditions which take all their wages for food, clothing and rent, and make it plain that their labor counts in winning a war for genuine freedom and not for private profiteering, and workers can be confidently expected to do their part."

Mr. Lyons is more volatile and unstable at the moment than the question of labor in its relationship to the war and post-war era.

FEAR TROTTLING MOVE

At the same time, there was a growing feeling that because labor has now grown to vast proportions as an economic entity an effort was being made to curtail the right of collective bargaining on the part of workers.

"Labor and industry must combine, must work out a mutually satisfactory policy, and must learn to live together in the fullest measure of co-operation."

He praised the heroism of the Russian people and expressed hope the Russians will take their place alongside the United States and Canada in the onward march of democracy.

"Democracy throughout the world will not be really secure unless the Russian people themselves take their rightful place among the democratic forces of the earth."

Hitler to Free French Prisoners Of Dieppe Area

BERLIN (from German broadcasts), Aug. 26.—(AP)—Hitler, "in appreciation of the attitude of the population of Dieppe" during the Canadian-led raid of Aug. 19, yesterday ordered the release of all French war prisoners whose homes are in or near the old French town.

Labor Scores Ottawa Over Highway Pay

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Criticism of the functioning of the national and regional war labor boards occupied a great part of Wednesday's morning session of the 58th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

A resolution, submitted by the Calgary Trades and Labor Council and passed by the convention, urged the executive council of the congress to "impress upon the Dominion government the necessity of amending order in council P.C. 5963 setting forth the instructions that decisions of the national and regional war labor boards must be rendered within a certain specified time and that this shall be mutually agreed upon by the executive council and the Dominion government."

J. A. D'Aoust of Ottawa, congress secretary, said the congress had made many representations to federal authorities on the matter and that in many instances officials of the war board did not understand the application of the act.

A resolution from the Edmonton Beverage Dispensers and passed by the convention urged the federal government "to inaugurate a labor wage policy in accordance with the present day conditions and requirements in conformity with the United States wage labor policy which has proven to be far more advanced than that of Canada.

Malcolm Ainslie of Edmonton, stating the minimum wage paid by Canadian contractors on the Alaska highway was far below that paid by American contractors, said "American contractors had made arrangements with Canadian labor regarding wages and then the Canadian government stepped in to sabotage the labor and contract with the United States."

Carl Berg, also of Edmonton, international representative for the Congress, told the convention that "at least six weeks to two months had been lost" on the highway project "because of employers and their agents." He said the United States government and contractors were willing to pay higher wages but that the Canadian government had interfered.

Need For Naval, Air Cover Shown In Dieppe Attack

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The Dieppe raid, in which the losses of ships from the air attack were small, emphasized the importance of adequate naval and air cover, it was said authoritatively today.

Compared with the heavy losses in Norway, Crete, Greece and elsewhere, where ships were operated in narrow waters without strong air support, an authoritative source said, the ships and landing craft engaged at Dieppe were able to remain for nine hours close off the French coast with only small losses.

This was due, he said, to the strong air support given by R.A.F., R.C.A.F., and other Allied groups.

Vichy Blackout Is Re-Established As Planes Heard

VICHY, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The Laval government ordered the blackout re-established in Vichy today following several nights in which unidentified planes had bombed a passenger train in the Paris region early today, killing the engineer and fireman. Another report said 45 bombs fell harmlessly in the field of the Nord department.

Doctor Proves Sugar Bought Medical Use

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WETASKIWIN, Aug. 26.—Charged with purchases of excess amounts of sugar in contravention of Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations, Dr. A. A. Reeves, prominent Wetaskiwin physician, was dismissed in police court here Tuesday when he satisfied the court he had made the purchases for medical use only.

R. W. Manley, K.C., for the defence, moved for a dismissal of the charge on the grounds that none of the evidence showed any part of the sugar had been converted to personal or household use. Dr. Reeves asked, however, that the motion be withdrawn and that the hearing proceed so that the true facts might be laid before the court.

GROCERS TESTIFY

Six local grocers testified they had each delivered 10 pounds of white and the same amount of brown sugar to the physician's office during the last week of June. At that time coupon rationing was not in effect and vouchers for extra sugar were not available.

R. J. Hamilton, inspector, who laid the charge on behalf of the board, testified he had visited the physician's office to check the sugar purchases. The doctor had readily admitted the purchases and had told him the sugar was being used for medical purposes. He had urged the inspector to visit the dispensary to see what use it had been put to, but the inspector had declined, pointing out he was merely investigating excess purchases and was not there to search.

Explaining his use of the sugar, Dr. Reeves stated that in the course of post-graduate study this spring he had learned of the recently-discovered value of large amounts of concentrated syrup in combination with drugs in the treatment of goitre whereby many cases were saved from surgery. It was in the preparation of this treatment that the sugar had been used.

Dr. Reeves testified he had made the purchases at different stores because no one store was able to supply his full needs.

Miss Mae Ash, assistant in the physician's office, substantiated this testimony.

Magistrate Simpson then dismissed the charge. W. H. Odell, K.C., acted for the crown.

POSITION OF ARMY GREATLY STRENGTHENED

"To Fight For Egypt Like Soil Of England,"—Churchill

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

WITH PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL IN THE MIDDLE EAST, Aug. 22.—(Delayed) — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill declared today that the Allied desert army is in a greatly-strengthened position and that Britain is "determined to fight for Egypt and the Nile Valley as if it were the soil of England itself."

He expressed "sober confidence in the future" before flying home after two trips to the Middle East which lasted a total of two weeks.

He left Cairo Sunday and reached London Monday night.

He visited this crossroad of three continents, imperilled by the Germans 80 miles west of Alexandria and in the Caucasus, both on his way to and returning from his epochal conference with Premier Joseph Stalin in Moscow.

He inspected army, navy and R.A.F. units in the desert and also engaged in numerous conferences, two results of which have been the establishment of a new command in Iran and Iraq and a shakeup in the Middle East command which placed Gen. Sir Harold Alexander in charge of the Middle East armies with Lt-Gen. B. L. Montgomery in command of the 8th Army in the desert.

Speaking to war correspondents and Egyptian newspapermen before his departure, Mr. Churchill said:

"I congratulate all here upon the admirable manner in which the shocks and uncertainties of these recent weeks were sustained. Now we are in a much stronger position. I feel sober confidence in the future.

"I feel that a historic, epic struggle in the desert will come to a victorious conclusion, though the road may be long and fraught with doubt be many pitfalls and disappointments as we tread that long road.

"There is one thing I would like to make absolutely clear and that is that we are determined to defend for Egypt and the Nile valley as if it were the soil of England itself.

"Everything that can be brought by ships and by air to drive the enemy back—and not only drive him back but drive him back in such way that his power to injure will be done—all this will be done.

"Whatever happens—and chances of war fluctuate now this way and now that—you should hear that in mind. And you should feel sober confidence that in the end when the story has been told you will see that we have not failed in our treaty obligations. We intend to keep the Nile Valley and the people of the delta safe from all foreign aggression and attack."

ENDURING LINK

The prime minister concluded that when the whole story of the defence of Egypt becomes known, "the fame of the deeds of the army of the Nile will form an enduring link between the British and Egyptian peoples and also a tie with our American allies who in increasing numbers and increasingly-important positions are maintaining their invaluable aid in the conflict."

On his second visit to the desert troops, Mr. Churchill lived with the soldiers two days, eating at the officers' messes and sleeping in a caravan captured from an Italian general.

On his first visit he saw mainly Dominion troops, and on the second he devoted his time to troops of the United Kingdom.

He greeted them heartily everywhere he went, always responding to their salutations with the "V" salute.

CHALLENGED BY SENTRY

While on a night stroll he was challenged by an Indian sentry. Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, British chief of staff who accompanied him, supplied the password without which the Prime Minister might have been held for an investigation.

Sweeping along the desert coast in an automobile escorted by armored cars, Mr. Churchill came upon many soldiers as they were shaving. Fighter planes were overhead and artillery men stood at their anti-aircraft guns to repulse any enemy attack on him.

He visited Australian units and called on the New Zealanders in their positions far out in the desert.

His presence also elicited salutes from an occasional Bedouin—those desert nomads who wander over the sands with only a slight academic interest in the war raging nearby.

Among the regiments he visited was his own old one, the 4th Hussars. They ride tanks.

Mr. Churchill saw newly arrived troops in other parts of the desert, including famous Scottish units. He told them they had arrived in time for the real battle of Egypt.

FACED DANGER

Chosen As Sailor Prince, Duke Most Air-Minded Of All Royal Family Members

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The Duke of Kent, christened George Edward Alexander Edmund, was chosen by his father, the late King George V, to carry on the family tradition by being "a sailor Prince," but he turned out instead to be the most air-minded of the four royal brothers.

Born Dec. 20, 1902, he entered the Royal Naval Training College at Dartmouth a few months before his 14th birthday. He passed through as a midshipman in 1921 and spent eight years with the Mediterranean and Atlantic fleets, the China Squadron and also did duty on the American and West Indies station.

But ill-health and a not overstrong constitution forced him much against his own wishes to relinquish a naval career in March, 1929. He was then attached to the foreign office in order to gain knowledge of administration and the work of the department of state.

FIRST CIVIL SERVANT

Thus Prince George, as he was then called, became the first civil servant in the Royal family.

His duties at the foreign office were undertaken with the view of fitting him for the position of governor-general of one of the dominions.

But ill-health again interfered with his plans and in July, 1929, he was given an indefinite leave of absence from the foreign office owing to digestive troubles.

Flying, hunting, dancing, music and motoring all attracted him and he was acknowledged to be the best car driver and the best dancer in the Royal family.

A certain shyness which made itself apparent in his public appearances added a special charm to his personality.

After visiting Norway in December, 1930, to represent the King and Queen at the celebration of the 25th anniversary of King Haakon's accession, the Duke (still Prince George at that time) set out on one of the greatest adventures he had yet undertaken—an 18,000-mile tour of South America with his oldest brother, the then Prince of Wales.

TOURED BRITAIN

On his return he made a series of tours through industrial Britain.

Early in 1934 he made a 21,000-mile tour of South Africa—Rhodesia, the Belgian Congo and Portuguese territory.

This was to have been followed by a visit to Australia for the Victoria centenary celebrations but it was felt the strain would be too great notwithstanding that his physique had improved so much that while in South Africa he had climbed Table mountain.

Instead of Australia he went to Yugoslavia and Greece, a visit which culminated in the announcement in August of his betrothal to Princess Marina of Greece.

A month before the marriage he became the Duke of Kent, Baron Downpatrick and Earl of St. Andrews—the first Duke of Kent since 1799.

The Duke and Princess Marina were married in November, 1934, in the outstanding social event of the year. The ceremony in Westminster Abbey was broadcast throughout the world.

Soon after her arrival in England the beautiful young bride had endeared herself to the people of Britain. She was the youngest daughter of Prince and Princess Nicholas of Greece.

RAPID COURTSHIP

The courtship was rapid. Five days after the Duke arrived in Greece on a holiday he sent a message to Buckingham Palace asking for formal permission to become engaged. Consent was given by telegram.

Thoughtfulness for others was one of the Duke's characteristics and it was not surprising that he and his bride made their first public appearance after the wedding by attending a Christmas tea party for disabled ex-servicemen at Buckingham Palace.

The couple had three children —Prince Edward, born in October, 1935; Princess Alexandra, born Christmas day, 1936, and Prince Michael George Charles Franklin, born on July 4, American Independence day, this year.

President Roosevelt is one of six godparents of the youngest child, who is to be known as Prince George. The other godparents include the King, the King or Norway, Queen Wilhelmina, the Duke of Gloucester, and Crown Princess of Greece. At the christening the Duke himself was proxy for the President.

The Duke filled every moment of his time after the outbreak of war in the performance of a variety of official duties and personal visits to war victims, wounded and bombed.

OFTEN FACED DANGER

He was in personal danger many times from bombs, shells and machine-gun fire.

Only a week ago enemy aircraft raided a south coast area and bombed and machine-gunned the town where the Duke was staying. In November, 1940, German shells from French coastal batteries fell in Dover during his visit. During the Battle of Britain he missed bombs dropped on a Kent airdrome by four minutes.

The raid was sustained. He took shelter many feet below the chalk cliffs and had lunch there. After lunch he watched a fierce air battle over the channel.

Two months earlier—in July, 1940—the Germans raided the area he was visiting on official R.A.F. business. Bombs shook the building where he and his host's family were sheltering in the cellars.

On Aug. 12 of this year he repeated a centuries-old oath when he was sworn in as mater of Trinity House in succession to the late Duke of Connaught, his great uncle.

WORKED FOR BEVIN

For a time in 1941 the Duke worked for Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, and made a series of inspections of war production factories.

This tour followed his visit to Canada, where he flew from one end of the Dominion to the other, watching the ever-growing Commonwealth air training plan. He included the United States and Newfoundland in that tour and stayed at the White House as the guest of President Roosevelt.

During his tours of British industrial areas the Duke took a great interest in the workers' welfare, especially the plight of the unemployed. Many stories are told in connection with his meetings with the working classes.

Miners in a pit at Whitehagen felt so honored after the Duke had dug coal beside them that they named the section where he worked "the Royal corner."

Numerous stories are told of the Duke's calmness in the midst of the London "blitz."

DROVE DURING RAID

Emil Davies, London County Council chairman, was driven by the Duke through London riverside districts for four hours during a heavy raid. Davies said afterwards that "As the Duke appeared oblivious of it all I did my best to look equally indifferent."

On another occasion a bomb exploded within 80 yards of the Duke's car, showering it with debris. The Duke stepped out unshaken and calmly talked with the people of the neighborhood.

The Duke was intensely interested in sports. He played golf well and in pre-war days frequently teamed with the Duke of Windsor on the course. He was a regular attendant at amateur and professional boxing matches.

The Duke of Kent travelled widely. As Prince George he went on an official mission to South Africa in 1924 and the following year he was sent to join the British fleet on the China station.

FIRST VISIT INFORMAL

His first visit to Canada was an informal one. He arrived from the Far East at Victoria on the Empress of Russia, Nov. 29, 1926 and crossed Canada to Saint John where he sailed for Liverpool Dec. 7. En route he paid a visit to Governor-General Lord Willingdon and Lady Willingdon at Ottawa.

Prince George, the Prince of Wales (now Duke of Windsor) and Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin visited Canada in 1927 in connection with the celebration of the 60th anniversary of confederation. They were welcomed at Quebec by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Later they visited Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Niagara Falls and the Princes went across the Dominion to the Pacific coast. They returned east and sailed from Quebec Sept. 7.

On June 5, 1939, while the Duke of Kent was councillor of state during the absence of the King and Queen in Canada and the United States, a 43-year-old steel-worker named Ledwedge Vincent Lawlor fired the charge of a sawed-off shotgun near the Duchess as she left her home in Belgrave Square, London, to attend a theatre. The Duchess was not injured.

MAN OVERPOWERED

Two policemen overpowered the man who was later charged with "intent to endanger life or property." Lawlor, an Australian by birth, contended he had "no intention of harming anybody." The man was remanded for trial and after various adjournments the case dropped from the public notice.

Appointed

Neil Victor German, barrister and solicitor, who has been appointed assistant enforcement counsel to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at Edmonton, according to an announcement issued by Walter S. Campbell, regional director for the board for Alberta, Wednesday. Mr. German graduated from the University of Alberta in 1939 after a brilliant school career. He won the Rhodes Scholarship for 1940 and was admitted to the Alberta Bar on June 3, 1940.

U-Boat Menace Not Yet Licked, Expert Asserts

dreds of new large submarine chasers. The Canadian navy has been similarly active on the east and west coasts of Canada.

NAZIS WILL HIT HARD

Whether the American program is large enough remains to be seen, for we must assume that the Germans, too, are active and that when they hit again they will hit hard.

One plan that has been proposed has been the building of thousands of small chasers and it is a plan that appears worthy of consideration.

At a meeting in Washington on July 2, the United States small boat builders tried to persuade the navy to utilize their facilities to build thousands of anti-submarine motor boats. The builders argued that the submarine menace cannot be defeated merely by building ships faster than the enemy can sink them, by arming yachts, requisitioning work boats, and relying on airplanes and blimps, or by constructing a necessarily limited number of large boats from 80 to 100 feet long such as those now building for the navy.

FAST PRODUCTION

The small boat builders asserted that the one answer to the submarine lies in building very large numbers of fast small motor boats, of one or several standardized types.

The builders proposed a smaller type of wooden combat vessel than any yet turned out, its design would enable fast, large scale quantity production in yards not yet being used for war construction.

The proposed types are from 24 to 60 feet long and soon could be turned out in four figure quantities with little interference with the established American building program. They are relatively inexpensive and are manned by from three to seven men, but the small boat builders apparently have not sold their ideas to navy officials, who continue to put their faith in larger vessels.

EFFECTIVENESS NOT DENIED

Hundreds of 173, 165 and 110 and 90 footers are being built for the navy. The small boat builders do not deny the effectiveness of these larger types, but they claim that effectiveness would be multiplied many times by the co-operation of several thousand smaller-sized boats which could be completed simultaneously with the existing sub-chaser building program and at only a fraction of the cost.

The United States, in co-operation with Canada, has more than 35,000 miles of sea coast to defend from Point Barrow, Alaska, southward around Cape Horn and thence northward to Hudson Bay. The navy is building some 800 sub-chasers to cover this area with a single line of vessels to be spaced nearly 50 miles apart.

If all the chasers were used for the United States coast alone, they would be spaced nine miles apart. It would seem therefore that these are not enough, and that the proposed small boats would be useful to prevent Axis submarines from sowing mines off the entrances of harbors, destroying coastal aids to navigation, landing and picking up spies and maintaining a constant periscope watch on Allied maritime movements.

The small boat that can be put into mass production at once is a V-bottom craft of 30 knots speed, 60 feet long carrying two separately operated heavy calibre machine guns in armored turrets and six depth charges, two released off stern, the others in four L-guns, a total sufficient for two separate triangular patters. Depth charges replacements would be carried to the craft in rubber boats from a larger vessel.

Each boat would be also supplied with listening gear, radio phone, searchlights, parachute flares, tommy guns, and other necessary equipment.

Padre in Dieppe Raid Swims Back to Fallen

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Under a heading "The Men of Dieppe," the News Chronicle told this story yesterday: The raid was over. Loaded barges were pulling out of Dieppe. Suddenly on one barge carrying Canadian soldiers a man stepped to the side. On his battledress he wore the three pips of a captain and a deep purple ribbon.

He was the Presbyterian padre who had accompanied his unit on the raid and had landed with the troops, scaled cliffs and when the signal was given returned to the beach.

"I'm going back," the padre shouted to his men. "There are enough padres in England. Our fellows left behind will need help."

He dived overboard and swam ashore. Before the barge pulled out of sight he could be seen wading up the beach.

The identity of the padre can not yet be revealed. One of the men of his unit said "he was the finest guy in the regiment."

The padre is a 40-year-old Canadian Scot and had trained and lived with the men.

"And he was tough," said a Canadian soldier. "There was nothing of the armchair padre about him."

Civilian casualties from Axis bombing of the Mediterranean stronghold totalled 382 in July, including 84 killed, authorities announced.

New System For Army Call-Ups To Start Soon

By ERIC SANDERSON

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26—(CP)—Elliott M. Little, director of national selective service, told the 58th annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada yesterday that his department "shortly will be setting up a new method of calling men for the army."

Mr. Little, who addressed delegates for half an hour and then held a question period, was answering a question from one of the delegates and he did not elaborate.

TO BE REPRESENTATION

Questioned concerning the establishment of manpower advisory committees in various industries, Mr. Little said that "where a union exists there must be representation."

(Establishment of such committees in the hardrock mining and the pulp and paper industries has been announced.)

Mr. Little told delegate John Pearson of Vancouver that when a non-union man is hired by a company in which a union exists the employee is "subject to conditions as regard the present employees."

In answer to a question as to what Mr. Little planned to do about the discontinuance of part-time workers, he said "our desire is to see that every man has full-time employment. Our objective is full-time employment for everyone."

First 45,000-Ton U.S. Battleship is to be Launched Thursday

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. — (AP) — The 45,000-ton United States battleship Iowa, heavier by 10,000 tons than any other American warship, will go down the ways Thursday at the navy yard in Brooklyn seven months ahead of schedule. Its keel was laid June 27, 1940. Five sister ships—the New Jersey, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois and Kentucky—are being built in other yards.

Income Tax is Fair to All

This year the cost of the war shows another increase. Canada will need almost four billion dollars to carry on. Where is this increase to come from?

From the large income groups? Yes—but not from them alone! Their new tax rates range as high as 98%. A married man with an income of $50,000 must pay about 67c out of every dollar—or if he has an income of $100,000 he must pay about 78c out of every dollar.

From big companies? Yes—but not from them alone! The full amount of all excess profits has to be paid over to the government, while 30% of normal profits are taxed away.

Clearly, this is a battle for our very existence. Every person, rich and poor, must pay his or her share. Income Tax is fair to all. It distributes the load according to each person's ability to pay.

There's going to be less money in our pay envelopes—because the 1942 income tax of salary and wage earners is being deducted at the source during September 1942 to August 1943.

Here are facts you should know:

1. Deduction starts with the first pay-period beginning in September.

2. Your employer must deduct the amount provided by the official Table of Tax Deductions for your current rate of pay, taking account of the marital status, dependents and personal savings you show on Form TD-1.

3. If you do not file Form TD-1 with your employer, he must deduct the amounts provided by the Table for a single person without dependents and without personal savings.

4. The Table of Tax Deductions is designed to collect about 90% of your total 1942 tax after allowing for the National Defence Tax deducted during the first 8 months of 1942.

5. A margin of 10% has been left for adjustments so that, in most cases, over-deduction will be avoided without leaving a large balance to pay at the time of filing the annual return in September 1943.

6. If your salary or wages are less than ¾ of your income, your employer will make the deductions applicable to such salary or wages but you must also pay (by quarterly instalments commencing October 15, 1942) tax on your other income and must file your annual return in April 1943. Remittance Form T.7.B Individuals, for use in such cases, will be available sometime in September at Post Offices and local Income Tax offices.

Forms TD-1, which should be filed with your employer at once, may be secured from your employer, Post Offices, or Inspectors of Income Tax.

The Empire Sorrows

The tragic news that the Duke of Kent has met his death in the performance of his duty has shocked and grieved the whole British Empire.

There is no more sadness, intrinsically, in the sudden death of a Royal Prince than there is in the passing of the meanest private in the ranks. But just as His Majesty the King, by virtue of his sovereignty, is the pattern and symbol of all of us, so is the death of His Royal Highness, in a fashion, the symbol of that violent destruction which all our armed forces face and which so many have gallantly met.

In sorrowing for the royal dead, one sorrows for all the dead.

Millions will find it in their hearts to feel an outpouring of sympathy for the Duchess and the bereft children of His Royal Highness. There is added tragedy in the fact that the Duchess was so recently a mother.

There will be tender and loving sympathy for Queen Mary to whose motherly anxiety for her subjects has been added a personal, family grief.

And, above all, there will go out to His Majesty from all of the Empire the compassion of his people in an hour that has piled private sorrow upon all the dolours that daily rend his kingly heart.

The Empire mourns with the Royal family. For George of Kent was a bonny prince with a gift for winning men's hearts.

Drastic Manpower Control

Elliott M. Little, director of national selective service, tells Canada that his organization will expect the public's help in doing things, next week, that no one would have tolerated a year ago.

Everyone, says Mr. Little, will have to go to work. And every man and woman in the country will be placed in the kind of work selective service believes they should do. There is no limit on the authority of selective service in this regard.

This is good news. The more drastic and more sweeping the manpower regulations turn out to be, the better the patriotic and intelligent Canadian will like it.

Canadians have already seen how seriously the lack of manpower control can affect the country. For instance, had this control existed three months ago, valuable fruit crops in various parts of Canada would not have rotted on tree and vine.

Mr. Little should be assured that there is no limit to the sacrifice Canadians will make if they are assured that it is necessary and that everyone is being treated alike.

The latter condition, of course, is the crux of the whole matter. It is the essence of recruiting success and the essence of the manpower control plan.

Favoritism and special privilege, racial or sectional or social, will damn any plan. The Canadian people will enthusiastically support any measures, however drastic, so long as they apply to everyone without favor or exception.

Danger in Caucasus

There seems to be substantial reason for the current Russian warning of "great danger" in the Caucasus.

The German armies are no more than forty miles, on the north and on the south, from Stalingrad. Today it is believed they may have approached to within fifty miles of Grozny, the heart of the Caucasian oil fields from which the Soviets derive more than ten per cent of their entire oil supply.

The Russians argue, with considerable justification, that once Germany completes her conquest of the Caucasus, she will be able to release large bodies of troops for offensive and defensive operations in the West. And that, of course, would make the opening of a second front in continental Europe more difficult.

There is little profit in speculating along those lines. Beyond doubt, Premiers Churchill and Stalin have taken all this into consideration in laying their plans for a general invasion of Europe. And amateur criticism cannot alter the facts.

There is, however, this important fact to be remembered:

That the most Hitler can hope from the capture of the Caucasian oil fields is the ability to prolong the war. With an unlimited oil supply, he may be in a position to continue the struggle for another ten or even twenty years.

But—and this is the vital point—while the capture of the Caucasus may enable him to make the war longer, it does not bring him appreciably closer to winning it. That is to say, even a major collapse on any present front could not be decisive one way or another.

Heavy losses in Russia could cripple us badly. But the war has grown so unbelievably extensive that the final decision cannot be rendered on any front as they exist at present.

The danger in the Caucasus is doubtless great. But it is not a vital danger. Nor should we permit the alarmists to persuade us that it is. It is merely a call for greater effort, greater sacrifice and greater faith.

Why Tolerate It?

Vichy is said to be fortifying French Guiana heavily. Not only the notorious Devil's Island, but other islands along the coast are being stocked with troops and equipment.

The United Nations confess themselves to be gravely worried about it. With all South America, with the exception of Argentina and Chile, more or less committed to the Allied cause, French Guiana could easily become a dangerous base for Axis operations against that continent.

So the United Nations are distressed.

But why should they tolerate it? Vichy has shown herself to be an out-and-out enemy to the Allies. There is no doubt about the malignant intentions of Pierre Laval and Marshal Petain.

Devil's Island has been a blot on civilization for fifty years anyway. Good sense would seem to direct that French Guiana be taken over by the United Nations without delay.

The Nazi head butcher in Yugoslavia threatens that if he has to use "one more soldier" than the present occupying force for the suppression of the revolt, "this will mean the annihilation of Serbia". Perhaps the time has come when the Allies should tell Berlin plainly that they will change their air offensive policy and do some annihilating on their own account if the wholesale killing of people in the occupied countries is not stopped. There is not much humanity in sparing German and Italian civilians when it is known that so long as this is done people in the overrun countries will be slaughtered without just cause.

Planes Can't Replace Ships

By OLIVER STEWART, BRITISH AIR AUTHORITY

The possibility of using aircraft to do some of the work of ships is not a new idea. It has been put forward, at intervals, for 20 years at least.

Aviation enthusiasts always have believed that aircraft will in the end take over some of the work now done by surface craft. But in the past aircraft design has not been sufficiently advanced to make the thing practical. Only recently have aircraft sizes brought them near the stage where they can carry the great loads that have traveled by sea for so long.

From the wartime point of view, there are so many advantages in using aircraft for as much transport work as possible that the problem of providing machines to do it is certain to be re-examined with more attention than ever before.

It has been pointed out hundreds of times that the enemy has the advantage of working on interior lines of communications, while the United Nations are working on exterior lines. The only way the United Nations can get rid of this strategical disability or eliminate its effects on the battlefield is by using transport vehicles so fast that they more than counterbalance the advantage of shorter routes.

Moreover, aircraft are less vulnerable to enemy action on the long sea routes than ships.

There is a third advantage in air transport of munitions of war — speed.

On the Burma Road, a famous United States aircraft manufacturer claims that a single cargo plane could do the work of 120 trucks. There is an air service also to Egypt by the way of Central Africa. In fact there are air services between the producing centres, such as Great Britain and the United States, and almost every main war zone.

But the total weight of supplies carried on these routes is extremely small compared with the weight carried by other means.

There is nothing impossible about carrying everything by air. There exists sufficient experience of design to allow aircraft to be made big enough to take even the biggest-engineering components.

Aircraft even of large sizes are probably built more quickly than ships, when once production on a big scale is begun, and they probably use less raw material.

There is, however, a difficulty. It is that the total number of aircraft in all the air fleets of the world, if devoted entirely to the carrying of munitions, would only carry only a small fraction of the amount carried by ships.

Aircraft are being built at a great rate, but never fast enough to satisfy the military machine. The R.A.F. could use four times the number of aircraft it has got today. The United States army air forces and the United states navy, I imagine could do the same. Everywhere where fighting goes on there is a continuous demand for more and more aircraft. Production is enormous. In the United States it is touching figures almost unimaginable, but still the call is for more aircraft.

Priorities

So one thing is settled by the same process that settles most of the major problems of war — the scale of priorities.

What is the first thing needed by the United Nations? Is it bombers or is it transport aircraft? Is it fighters or freighters? Although we know nothing of the secret deliberations of the strategist, I don't think it's difficult to hazard a guess as to their decision in this matter. The factories of Britain and the United States are tooled up for military aircraft. Military aircraft can be modified and thus made to carry freight. But in any event they can never replace ships on a large scale—for such new and specialized machines would be necessary.

The pace of war is too great to allow any country to pause in the middle to create a vast air transport fleet. No doubt machines will be used for this purpose as they are being used today. But the weight they will carry will not approach that carried by ships.

Ancient Chinese Familiar With Aleutian Islands

By B. A. McKELVIE IN THE VANCOUVER PROVINCE

Occupation by Japanese forces of Attu and Kiska in the nearest islands group of the Aleutian chain —"nearest" because closest to the Asiatic shores—has drawn attention to this slim finger of North America stretching 1,200 miles westward toward the Kamchatka peninsula of Siberia.

Occupied and controlled by Russia half a century before other European nations learned, from the published journals of Captain James Cook's discoveries on the northwestern coasts of America, of the wealth of sea otter in the waters of the Pacific, it was nearly two centuries ago since traders first located the islands.

The existence of the fog-shrouded string of islands was known much earlier. Alaska itself was known to the Chinese fully 1,000 years before Columbus sailed across the Atlantic to discover America. It was known as Wan Shan.

An early account of one of the Aleutian group is contained in an ancient Chinese chronicle which says: In the reign of Wu-ti (about 508 A.D.) of the Liang dynasty, a man from Tsin-ngan was crossing the sea when he was caught in a storm and driven to a certain island. On going ashore he found it inhabited.

"The women were like those in China, but their speech was unintelligible. Of the men, the upper bodies, but their heads were like those of dogs and their voices resembled the barking of dogs."

In translation of the ideographic characters of the Chinese, considerable difficulty often arises. The character "ken" denoting dog is also a symbol for ugliness. It is possible, therefore, that reference to "dog's heads" may have been intended to picture the features of the island men as being particularly homely to the Chinese idea of beauty nearly.

Some ethnologists hold to the opinion that the Aleutian Islands, forming a broken causeway of 1,200 miles, was the bridge by which Northwestern America was first peopled from Asia.

Vitus Bering, in his memorable voyage of 1741, on which he perished, may have glimpsed the Aleutians, but it is fairly well established that he made his eastern-most landing at Kaye Island, in the shadow of Mt. St. Elias.

It was Michael Nevodilsof, four years later, who made the first recorded landing on the Island of Attu—which he called "Att."

"Having discovered three unknown islands," an old Russian record states, "they wintered upon one of them, in order to kill sea otters, which were numerous."

William Coxe, in his account of "Russian Discoveries," published in 1780 and revised in 1804, in commenting upon Novodisikof's discovery, says, "These were undoubtedly the nearest Aleutian Islands; the language of the inhabitants was not understood by a Kamchatkan interpreter."

For the purpose of learning the language, the Russian hunter carried one of the Islanders back to Siberia with him. His name was Temnac—later christened Paul. The native said that his island home was called "Att"—now Attu.

When Paul was able to converse in the Russian tongue, the story he told was not much to the credit of Novodisikof and his crew. They had been met in a friendly spirit by the simple natives, but by their treatment had caused resentment and hostility. With their firearms the Russians had slaughtered a number of the Aleuts who were armed only with bone-tipped lances.

While the Japanese have attained a foothold on the three westernmost islands that are habitable, Attu, Agattu and Kiska, their situation there must be, at the very best, a precarious one. The islands are foghound for the greater part of the year. It is this fact that makes air attacks difficult, and equally hinders them being used effectively for air offensive purposes. They can, however, be used as submarine bases.

Distrust of General de Gaulle Seems to be Ended

Had General de Gaulle not been "difficult" he would never have commanded the respect and admiration of his British allies that he does today, says Harold Nicholson, member of parliament and former under-secretary of state in Britain, paying a magnificent tribute to the personality of the fighting French leader in the London Spectator on August 14.

"General de Gaulle embodies the spirit of France," he writes, "his military qualities and supreme moral courage are undisputed."

"Yet," writes Nicholson, "we were perplexed at first and hesitant: it has taken us two years to understand de Gaulle. We see today that had he remained no more than an officer commanding a column of volunteers his representative functions would have been diminished. We regretted that he should be so difficult and unaccommodating, so authoritative: we see today that unless he had asserted himself in season and out of season he would have become no more than a foreign officer in the pay of the British treasury.

"We distrusted those by whom he was surrounded at first and disliked the methods often on occasions they pursued. We realize now that he was bound to improvise his national committee and that today he is composed of men whom all can respect.

"We were hurt by the emphasis which he placed upon his own independence, attributing his criticism of our methods to some dislike of English ways: we see now that his determination to remain essentially and combatively French was a wise determination and that when he returns he will not return in the baggage of the Allies.

"Had de Gaulle sought always to be convenient he would have ended by being ignored; the force of his personality highly inconvenient though it has proved at moments, renders it impossible that either he or France can ever be disregarded. The fears we once entertained lest he might on his return establish some military dictatorship have been dissipated by his own utterances and by the wider composition which he is now seeking to give his national committee. We see today that the apparent arrogance of his person embodies and defends the wounded pride of France; and in his faithful ruminative eye is reflected eternal patience of her wisdom."

Recalling the statement of Andre Philip, French resistance leader who escaped recently from France and was immediately given a place in the French National Committee by General de Gaulle), Nicholson continues: "The overwhelming mass of population in both zones are outspoken or tacid adherents of de Gaulle and convinced enemies of Vichy and collaboration with the Germans."

He concludes: "I do not believe that this great result could have been achieved but for the dynamic symbolism personified by the man who on that sad night of June 18, 1940 said, 'it is I, General de Gaulle who am speaking to you from London'."

Make Every German a Hostage

FROM THE SUNDAY DESPATCH (LONDON).

The demand is growing that the Allies should by reprisal try to stop the German murder of hostages.

M. Masaryk, Vice-Premier of the exiled Czech Government, has called for the destruction of German villages from the air.

This suggestion was made in the Sunday Dispatch last month. The matter was also raised in the House of Commons without the questioner receiving much satisfaction.

Now the need for Britain and America to take action is increased by a threat from the German Chief of Police in Paris. He says that the Germans will put to death all male members of the families of suspected saboteurs.

Their Choice

The threat is an infamous one, and we should study its implications. It might put a stop to, or considerably check, all the gallant underground fighting that is being done by those of our Allies who are living under German domination.

For the men and women who are fighting for our cause at terrible risk to themselves are faced with a hideous decision.

A man may feel that his own life can well be risked for his country's cause and yet hesitate to gamble with the life of his brother. A father may be driven to submission rather than imperil his son's life, or a son his father's.

It is a brutal but shrewd move by the Nazis, who are finding the growing wave of sabotage throughout the occupied countries a real threat to their plans.

But it is a move that can and must be countered.

We must approach the matter with this vital point clear in our minds—the shooting of a proven saboteur may be justifiable by the rugged rules of warfare, but the blatant execution of innocent hostages is terrorism run riot.

It can only be checked with equal terrorism, much as we may dislike the method.

Declaration

The Allied nations should declare that the entire German civilian population is considered hostage to us for the safety of the innocent civilians of Allied countries now in German hands.

Each time the Germans execute civilians who have taken no part in the war sabotage we should bomb a German community.

We need not fear counter-reprisals here, even though that fear would be unworthy. The German will work his maximum evil against us at all times irrespective of provocation.

The decision is long overdue. A declaration in the terms suggested, broadcast in every European language, would give new heart and inspiration to those who are fighting for us behind the enemy's lines.

And it would warn the German masses that at long last we are starting to fight them with their own weapons.

Those War Marriages

FROM THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Those "war marriages" are explained nowadays by not a product of the war. In the normal course of things, the current war brides would be united at some time to the same young men, says an expert on such subjects.

A large surplus of husbandless and marriageable women in the United States is forecast by another expert, who points out that after the last war Europe considered letting men have extra wives to take up the surplus.

A four-syllable word is used by Evelyn Mills Duvall to tell what has happened to the thousands of young couples who have new marriage certificates. The war "crystallizes" their decision, says Mrs. Duvall, who is the executive director of the Association for Family living.

Timid and hesitant swains, and girls waiting to fill their hope chests with silver and linens, suddenly awaken to the fact that time is a very important element and dash into the connubial state—and that circumstance is "coincidence" in Mrs. Duvall's opinion, told in a lecture today at the Institute of the Society for Social Research at the University of Chicago.

But Mrs. Duvall finds the brides facing a difficult future, as she said to her: "I'm a married woman, yet I'm not, and what shall I do?" Husbands have gone into the armed forces or to far war plants, and the bride must go home to her mother. Mrs. Duvall's prescription is "better counselling by skilled persons, more provisions for recreation and social life." She finds that even genial wives of servicemen should get together socially.

The fact that the Selective Service Act "crystallized" decisions to marry was attested by Philip M. Hauser, assistant director of the Census Bureau, who spoke before the Institute about the expected surplus of women. The marriage rate soared to a peak when the draft act was introduced in Congress and when it was passed, he said.

Generosity

LONDON TIMES

Major-General Sir Frederick Maurice, president of the British Legion, broadcasting on the occasion of the legion's 21st birthday, said the last Poppy Day collection had totalled £751,000—more than £100,000 better than the previous record.

On the flag day for the lifeboat service in Greater London the public gave £191,114, which is £4,875 more than in 1941 and more than twice as much as in the last year of peace, states another authority.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP) — Depressing war reports from Moscow, stressing the dangerous position of Stalingrad, again dominated stock market trends today and leaders fell fractions to a point or more.

Up to Mid-day certain of the key issues showed fair resistance, but in the later proceedings the retreat became general with some acceleration in volume. In a few instances losses ran to 2 or more points in the final hour.

Interest Revived In Flour Exports

WINNIPEG, Aug. 26—(CP)—Export interest in flour revived today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange but there were no indications of export in wheat. The October wheat future closed unchanged at 90 cents a bushel.

Trade was featured by the export sales of flour to the United Kingdom estimated as close to the equivalent of 2,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Cash wheat trade was slow with mills still showing interest in No. 4 Northern through limited supplies confined purchases to a few odd cars.

Hedging showed in oats and barley in coarse grains. Shippers took moderate quantities and prices held firm.

Country marketings yesterday totalled 445,000 bushels compared to 1,897,000 bushels a year ago. Grain inspections at Winnipeg amounted to 461 cars compared to 1,004 cars a year ago.

Give Brazil Rights

BOGOTA, Colombia, Aug. 26—(AP)—Colombia granted non-belligerent rights to Brazil yesterday.

Tell Need of High Speed in War Production

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 26.—Canada has established a high reputation on all fighting fronts as a producer of top quality weapons of war. The fighting forces are counting on Canadian war workers to keep up the steady flow of tanks, guns, trucks, shells and all the munitions made in the Dominion.

Any let down in production in Canada would let the boys down badly over there. They need every bit of equipment that our factories can turn out and they need it just as soon as it can be made and got across to them.

This is the opinion of a group of men back in Canada from several widely separated war fronts All are connected with Ford of Canada and all have first hand knowledge of the equipment situation in active theatres of war. They know just how important the pace of production in North America's factories is to the winning of the war.

LIFETIME THRILL

For three of these seven men their return to Canada was the thrill of a lifetime. C. R. Michaels, Fred Hildreth and M. J. Bartlett came from Singapore via Australia. They tell a thrilling story of narrow escapes from death and of the hectic day that preceded the fall of Singapore. All three agreed that the most satisfactory thing about Canada is the absence of bombs and blackouts. While being interviewed a training plane screamed into a power dive and the three men winced for a moment. They know too well the meaning of that sound.

"We were given a hard lesson at Singapore which should never be forgotten in any of the United Nations. The strength of the Jap was revealed there and more men and more equipment certainly could have been used to advantage. Australia can use every bit of equipment that can be sent from this continent and every possible effort should be made to see that it gets there in time," said Mr. Michaels, the managing director of Ford of Malaya. Along with the other two men he was in Singapor up until three days before the enemy occupied the district where the Ford plant stood.

ONE THOUGHT

"In North America there should be only one thought in everyone's mind and that is 'production.' Surely bombs in your own backyards are not necessary to convince Canadians that production is vital to victory. I hope no one in Canada is taking the attitude, 'It won't happen here.' Such an attitude is dangerous to the extreme. It is far better to make sure that it can't happen here," said these men who have experienced the lash of the Axis whip.

Back from Cairo, where every night is a blackout and the war is very close, came Kuno Stockelbach, Ford service expert, who has been acting as technical advisor to the British command in the Middle East for the past year.

Asked if there is sufficient equipment reaching Egypt from Canada and the United States, Mr. Stockelbach said that the flow is increasing steadily.

"But it must be remembered that in this war you can't have too much equipment. If we had twice as much in the Middle East as we have now we still wouldn't have too much," he said. He is high in his praise of equipment of all types from North America. He said the tanks are very effective and that guns and trucks from Canada's factories are proving the quality of Canadian workmanship and design every day.

W. D. Follis from the Ford plant in South Africa cites the attitude of South African war workers as a glowing example of all-out war effort.

INCREASE OUTPUT

"In our plant we were asked to supply vehicles in unheard of numbers after the outbreak of war. Many of the men on our production lines are Africans who speak little, if any, English. Their loyalty to Britain was in doubt in some quarters, but I would like Canadians to know that these men cooperated so wholeheartedly and worked so hard that we were able to increase production fourfold over the peacetime rate, and they have maintained that pace. No men ever worked more faithfully for British freedom," said Mr. Follis.

The opinion that production is the important thing in Canada was also borne out by G. Erskine and C. M. Finkle, Ford of Canada men, who have been working in England with military authorities on the servicing and maintenance of Canadian-made mechanical transport.

"Over there we are banking heavily on the output of Canadian factories. It is vitally important that production schedules be maintained at the highest possible levels," they state.

Wheat Drops Cent On Chicago Mart

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 — (AP) — With losses of about a cent a bushel, the wheat market today absorbed moderate selling to offset the effect of larger receipts at northwest terminals so far this week and to mirror trade reaction to anti-inflation news from Washington.

Accused is Taken To Southern City

Richard Joe Safransky, who was arrested at a city station Sunday, was escorted to Calgary Tuesday to answer a charge of breaking and entering Webb's Men's Shop.

Safransky was met at the C.P.R. station at 1:15 a.m. Sunday when the Vancouver train pulled in at the north station. Detectives Hugh Morrow and Alex. Bremner made the arrest and escorted him to the city police station.

He was confined there awaiting arrangements for escort to Calgary, and was taken south by R.C.M.P. Tuesday.

Safransky jumped from a second storey window of an east-end apartment block at Calgary when Detective Andy Hendry entered the block to question him about the Webb burglary.

McCoy Health Service

Even as you are reading this article, you are making poisons within your body. If they are allowed to accumulate too long, they will prove as deadly as any strong toxic substance. However, the body has an efficient method of removing such toxins as they form in the tissues, and they are carried to one of the channels of elimination and there gotten rid of. Part of the eliminative system of the body is located in the two kidneys. The kidneys are in close communication with the blood, and filter from it poisonous wastes which are flushed out of the body in solution.

The kidneys are about four and one-half inches long and their task of cleansing the blood stream is so important that you lose your life if you lose both kidneys. Man can live if he has only one healthy kidney, but can not live if both are gone. It is interesting to note that about one person out of every sixteen hundred is born with only one kidney and usually gets along all right.

Each kidney is formed of many small tubes, or tubules, twisted together, which collect waste from the capillaries carrying the blood, the waste material passing through the thin wall of the blood vessel and also the delicate wall of the tubule. From each tube, the waste collects in a small pocket in the kidney and from there drains down to the bladder by way of the ureter.

The kidneys have this mysterious power of extracting wastes from the blood and throwing them out with water, but they do not extract nourishment from the blod stream. Normally, the liquid output of the kidneys contains no nourishment. When the kidneys become diseased, as in Bright's disease, they reverse the normal process, and the liquid waste then contains nourishing substances.

We do not understand how the kidneys do their work during life and can not explain the intelligence which is shown by the healthy kidney in the way that it refuses to excrete food but permits garbage materials to pass. It is just as though the kidneys said to the delivery boys of the blood who are distributing groceries: "Keep on with your work," and said to the garbage boys, "This way out."

You should try to keep your kidneys as healthy as possible, inasmuch as they will no longer remove poisons efficiently after they become diseased. The kidneys are like any other organ—they thrive on moderate use, but react adversely to abuse. Those who eat correctly, drink enough water, and observe other good habits of health, are doing the best things for giving the kidneys a long, healthy life.

I have for distribution a number of articles to be sent to those who want additional information. These articles are called: Water and Kidney Elimination; Our Kidneys; Albumin; Bright's Disease; Wandering Kidney. You may have any or all of these articles forwarded to you when you desire them. Simply ask for those you want, send your letter to McCoy Health Service in care of this newspaper, and enclose one large, self-addressed envelope and ten cents.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1151 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

THE other day that very crotchety American, Commander James Joseph Tunney of the U. S. Navy, erstwhile king of the heavyweights, popped off again and termed the high pressure ballyhoo the scribes are turning on American army and navy sports "wonderful nonsense". Tunney also asked the writers to stop lionizing athletes in service.

It seems that Tunney still does not understand what put that $1,000,000 in his pocket when he fought Dempsey. He apparently thinks it was attracted solely by his own magnetic personality—plus a bit of magnetism on Dempsey's part.

The truth of the matter seems to be that Tunney's personality would hardly attract even passing interest on a desert island inhabited only by spinsters.

It was the sport writers working with materials, that admittedly were suitable when polished up a bit, that built the Tunney fortune and those million-dollar gates of the twenties. They are now working with far less suitable materials. In an effort to make service sport events draw the big gates that the army and navy funds need. The commander might well be a little kindlier toward these men who get nothing but extra work out of the things they are doing for service men.

THEY KNOW THE COUNT

BUT the boys in the press boxes of the United States and Canada know a trifle more about the business than does the good Commander Tunney. For example, they know just what of their output is wonderful nonsense and what is the real McCoy.

There are also times when they lean back in their chairs, put their feet on their desks, light a smoke and wonder if maybe both the wonderful nonsense and real McCoy are not just a waste of time that could be spent more profitably doing some job like raising turnips.

For those who may be a bit dubious about the value of sport and its colorful ballyhoo, I respectively suggest they take a look at "The Pride of the Yankees", the film presentation of the life of Lou Gehrig. A bunch of us got a preview of it here the other day at the censor's private projection room.

The picture is damned by its title. It's as dead as a Horatio Alger title . . . about as gripping as the title your kid sister plastered over her first effort at a love story.

BIGGER THAN BASEBALL

BUT forget the title, which should have been just plain "Lou Gehrig." The picture is something you won't forget in a hurry. Don't expect to see a lot of inside baseball. The game is just a background for a far bigger story—the story of a wholesome, successful life.

Paul Gallico, a New York sport writer who sat on the inside for many years and then kissed it all good-bye in the book "Farewell To Sport", is the man who wrote the story of Gehrig's life for the movie. They say he was pretty well burned up over the way the studio made changes in his original. Furthermore, most of the sport writers who wrote the day by day story of Gehrig's career are a bit disappointed with the film treatment.

Those objections do not seem very important to me. The exactness of detail and athletic perfection that such experts would instinctively want wouldn't make the sort of picture that would appeal to greatest number of the 140 million people in the United States and Canada.

But the film has a terrific wallop. I've never seen a real life story that packed so much punch.

FOR EVERY BOY

IT would be one of the greatest things ever done for the youth of the United States and Canada if it were somehow made possible for every teen-age boy to see this picture. The all-time records that Gehrig set in baseball are small compared to the inspiring example he set of clean, courageous living.

The final scenes of the picture are unforgettable . . . Yankee Stadium jammed to capacity for the final tribute to Lou when he and most everyone else knew that death was not far away . . . the kid who spoke to him as he entered the stadium that afternoon.

Somehow none of this stuff strikes me as being "wonderful nonsense". To some extent the whole structure of baseball and every other sport has foundation stones in every small town and city—yes even in country schools—throughout the United States and Canada. Even the most obscure of the writing fraternity plays an important part in keeping those stones in position.

No one will ever know how many worthwhile lives could be traced back to a spot of praise or even a word of praise or criticism dashed off by some sport writer whose name is unknown to more than a scant thousand or two. It was a sport writer who sparked Gehrig's career. If this is "wonderful nonsense", it certainly hasn't done the country any harm.

Heroes Because They Were Good

Babe Ruth, Product of Own Era

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Babe Ruth sending a baseball in a tremendous arc into the blur of faces in right field. . . . Bill Tilden enlivening the centre court at Wimbledon with petty, ill-tempered histrionics. . . . Jack Dempsey attacking with snarling, tigerish ferocity. . . . Helen Wills blandly sweeping to net victory after net victory. . . . The Four Horsemen—Bobby Jones.

All were a part of that era of wonderful nonsense; the fabulous '20s with their golden showers for the professional athlete, their three-sheet publicity for the amateurs, their flagpole sitters and bunion derbys.

Memories of those gaudy, carefree days crowded out the present in the minds of the more than 60,000 fans who watched Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson at the Yankee Stadium last Sunday.

And the Babe did more than revive memories with prodigious clouts.

In a way he was proving that the memory had not played tricks: that the heroes of that era were not just heroes because of the money they received, or the publicity.

They were heroes because they were good.

When a fat, untrained 47-year-old can shake off the rust of inactivity overnight and came out to knock a baseball farther than nine-tenths of the young, active players of today, you get an idea of what the Babe was like in his hey-day.

And the Babe, in showing that there is only one Babe, by proxy was showing that there is only one Jones, and Tilden, and Wills, and Dempsey.

Over-paid and over-publicized they were, but the fact remains they dominated their fields because they were good.

Indians no Longer Show In Big Ten

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 — (AP) — Cleveland Indians, who once threatened not only to win the American League pennant but also to carry off four or five top places in the individual batting chase, long ago dropped out of the title race and today haven't a man left among the league's top 10 hitters.

At various times Oris Hockett, Les Fleming, Jeff Heath, Roy Weatherley and manager Lou Boudreau all held lofty places in the select batting. This week even Fleming isn't included in the top 10.

Joe Gordon

The scrap for first, of course, is still between Boston's Ted Williams and New York's Joe Gordon, with Ted continuing in front despite a six point slump last week. Through Monday's game Williams had a .346 average to .337 for Gordon. Close behind were Stan Spence of Washington at .333, Taft Wright of Chicago at .332, and John Pesky of Boston at .327.

The remainder of the field was Bobby Doerr, Boston and George Case, Washington, tied at .317; Wally Judnich, St. Louis, .311; Joe Dimaggio, New York, .306, and Vernon Stephens, St. Louis, .303.

The Williams stranglehold on three specialty departments continued with Ted leading in runs batted in, 111; home runs, 26, and runs scored, 107.

Joe Gordon moved one point ahead of Ted Williams as a result of Tuesday's games, the Yankee slugger boosting his average to .341, one point better than the Red Sox clouter.

Slaughter is Creeping Up On Reiser

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Reflecting the National League pennant battle between their clubs, Pete Reiser of Brooklyn Dodgers and Enos (Country) Slaughter of St. Louis Cardinals are tangling in an interesting contest for the circuit's batting lead.

PETE REISER

Slaughter came up from fourth place to second during the past week and after Monday night's tussle was only seven points behind Reiser. Slaughter's average rose 12 points from .316 to .328.

Ernie Lombardi of Boston was shoved back into third place as his average dropped to .320. Stan Musial of St. Louis, with a three-point gain to .319, took over fourth place while Joe Medwick of Brooklyn dropped seven points and landed in fifth at .316.

Other regulars in the big 10 after Monday's games were Lou Novikoff, Chicago, .313; Johnny Mize, New York, .302; Walker Cooper, St. Louis, .301; Stan Hack, Chicago, .300, and Bob Elliott, Pittsburgh, .294.

Three Bunts Pave Way for Winning Run

By STEVE ROBERTSON

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—(AP) — That Brooklyn National League lead doesn't look quite so imposing now and if the Dodgers don't pull themselves together in a hurry it's going to melt like snow before a chinook.

For the second successive night St. Louis Cards trimmed the league leaders last night, pushing across a run in the last of the 14th to win 2-1 at Sportsman's Park before a record floodlight crowd of 33,260, and as a result the National League champion's margin over the second-place Cardinals has been whittled to 5½ games.

Terry Moore slugged the winning hit, scoring Marty Marion, who had been on third.

The three hour and 39 minute contest ended in anti-climax, in a way, for Les Webber was on the mound when Marion shot across home plate. He had relieved Larry French, who had relieved the weakening Whit Wyatt in the 13th. Mort Cooper went all the way for the Cards.

Bunts finally paved the way for the victory for the Cards, after swinging freely, failed to dent the tight Brooklyn defence of Whit Wyatt, who allowed only seven hits in 12 2-3 innings.

George Kurowski opened the final inning for the winners with a perfect—and safe—bunt. Marion then bunted down the first base line, was fielded by Dolph Camilli, who attempted to catch Kurowski at second. The attempt failed. Webber then came in and Mort Cooper dropped the third straight bunt, but Kurowski was forced at third. Jimmy Brown walked, filling the bases and setting the stage for Moore.

Manager Leo Durocher erupted in typical fashion in the 12th inning, after comparative quiet had reigned on the Dodger dugout since the beginning of the series. His protest over a strike pitched to Fred Walker in the first half of that inning caused Barr to banish him to the clubhouse.

Wyatt, whose pitching had been murderously effective up to that point, caught the fever and took up the verbal battle with Barr in the last half of the 12th over a ball called on Marion. Coaches Charlie Dressen and Freddie Fitzsimmons pushed Wyatt back, but Durocher got the thumb to the clubhouse when he renewed the argument.

There was more than enough color in the 13th inning, when the Dodgers broke the scoring stalemate as Mickey Owen's single, Wyatt's sacrifice and Lew Riggs' sharp single to left centre.

But the Cards were not down yet, for after Stan Slaughter walked with one out in the last of the 13th, Stan Musial singled him to second. Then Walker duplicated Rigg's blow, scoring Slaughter with the tying counter. French took over at the fifth point.

Only a magnificent stop by Billy Herman of pinch hitter Coaker Triplett's whizzing grounder, which he turned into a double play kept the Cards from taking the game right there.

Brooklyn	000	000	000	000	10	—1	10	1
St. Louis	000	000	000	000	11	—2	9	1

(14 innings).

Wyatt, French (13) Webber (14) and Owen; M. and W. Cooper.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Cheques totalling $162,890.40, representing the proceeds of the all-star game at the Polo Grounds July 6 and the Dodger-Giant Bear-New York Giant charity game Aug. 3, were presented yesterday by Horace Stoneham, Giant president, to Col. Cleans Up Overseas Meet

Great Canadian Sprinter Fancies Job as Teacher

PORTSMOUTH, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Johnny Loaring, whose flying feet carried him to the front ranks of the world's trackmen, wants to be a school teacher after the war.

That's one reason why the fair-haired Windsor, Ont., boy who scored points for Canada in the last Olympic and British Empire games is happy about the job he's doing now on the instructional staff of His Majesty's signal school.

Loaring hasn't much to say about his present work—"the Germans would probably like to know something about it too," he explains—but it was important enough to get him a recall from the Middle East and has kept him on land for more than a year.

"I'm rather lucky to be doing this sort of thing," the young naval lieutenant said. "I always wanted to be a teacher and the work I'm doing now should come in handy after the war. And what's more, I know it a heck more now than when I first joined up."

Johnny is lucky in more ways than one to be instructing. He was serving in the cruiser Fiji a year ago last May when she was dive-bombed and sunk during the Crete evacuation and spent three hours in the water before a destroyer picked him up.

Loaring was in the final year at University of Western Ontario, London, Ont., when war began and with every member of his class joined the Canadian Navy. They came overseas together in May, 1940.

Despite two years of navy life, the young lieutenant is running up to his previous standards.

"I don't think I've been in better condition since the Olympic Games than I was at Epsom last month (July)," Loaring said.

Loaring was referring to an inter-services track meet in which he won the 440-yard race in 49 seconds flat and the 440-yard hurdles in 54.4 seconds, best times turned in for these events in England since the war began.

E.A.C. Juniors to Practice Tonight

Another practice for the Edmonton Athletic Club's entry in the Junior Rugby League has been called for 7 o'clock tonight at Clarke Stadium and Coach Paul Kirk asks that there be a full turnout.

In the event of the weather interfering, a chalk talk will take the place of the regular workout.

Manager George Snowden reports that over 30 boys were out on Monday night and later had the pleasure of listening to a pep talk given by Dean Griffing, coach of the Regina Rough Riders who happened to be in the city.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

By SCOTT YOUNG

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The 37-cent thoroughbred, Omar's Gift, won't go to the races again this season. . . . She suffered bad leg cuts during the British Columbia Futurity and her owner, Scotty Kennedy of Winnipeg, will tuck her away to rest up. . . . The filly's career has been a fairy story since she went to Kennedy for that ridiculous sum, and the way she responds to treatment will determine whether the yarn will be a short short or a serial.

Suggestion: While hockey men are observing the closed-mouth policy with meticulous exactness in fear too much talk would queer the plans being hatched in Ottawa, constructive suggestions for the sports' future have been few and far between. . . . Al (Montreal Herald) Parsley has one that's worth consideration, and it's quite a simple thing. . . . He recalls that in the International Baseball League a player subject to call for military service merely leaves his name and address with his draft board along with a copy of the league schedule. . . . When the call comes, the authorities can reach him in a few hours. . . . In hockey, observance of that policy would eliminate the passport difficulties that blighted some clubs, left others untouched, last season.

The expert says Bill (Vancouver Province) Dunford, on the news report that Lynn Patrick's wife had divorced him for cruelty: "Lynn is mild enough at the party he gave for me when I was one year old."

Incidentally: Vince (Winnipeg-Tribune) Leah reports that hockey sticks will be 51 inches long this season, instead of 54 inches, and will be manufactured in only two models for forwards and defencemen and two for goalkeepers. . . . Coast reports have Jimmy McLarnin about to enter the United States navy. . . . Mc-Larnin lives around Los Angeles and he'll be pitted with Vancouver, his home town. . . . He was a contact man in Los Angeles and Hollywood for the Lions' title open last week, made sure the movie stars headed north in time for the big game. . . . Gordon Gellveys, the gigantic Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver football lineman, is still trying to crack the navy or air force. . . . He turned out to one Winnipeg practice. . . . It would seem a safe bet that Bombers won't have overmuch trouble in fielding a good team in defence of their Canadian championship.

"Better Than Alice Marble"

New Star Looms on U.S. Tennis Horizon

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The scholarly Mercer Beasley says, without batting an eye, that the United States already has developed a better woman tennis player in 19-year-old Louise Brough than Alice Marble was when she turned professional two seasons ago.

His statement was on the startling side, inasmuch as Miss Marble was in a class by herself for the last few years of her amateur career and some competent judges thought she belonged in the same "all time" category with Helen Wills Moody and Suzanne Lenglen.

Miss Brough, on the other hand, was only a junior last year and was ranked No. 10 among U.S. women players.

Beasley insisted that "right now she is better than Marble ever was.

"She has everything, including three different services and a fine net game. Equally important, she is a perfect judge of her own ability—never tries to make a shot she can't make. And to top it all, she has youth and all the stamina in the world."

Sports .... Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.— (AP) — What difference does it make if the Yankees are nine games in front and the Dodgers 6½, did you ever see such a race as they're having in the American Association . . . The standings (as of yesterday) show only six games from first-place Milwaukee to seventh-place Indianapolis . . . Count out Newark, and the International is almost as close—five games from second to seventh . . . Sidelight on a great athlete: When Babe Ruth was dressing after his first workout in years at the Yankee stadium, Red Ruffing glanced over at the Babe surrounded by admiring younger Yankees, and remarked, "Look at that guy; he still hangs up his uniform" . . . No extra work for the clubhouse boy when the Babe's around.

One-minute sport page.

Latest word on the hockey situation is that Madison Square Garden is preparing for 24 home games for the Rangers and none at all for the Americans . . . Wonder if that means the league is dropping a weak member or that Red Dutton is more interested in building air fields and such things up in Canada? . . . Mel Allen, who airs the Yanks' games, likely will be the No. 1 talker on the world series broadcast this year . . . Busiest guy at the national tennis championships probably will be Eugene Falkenburg, who is only a week-end player. His two boys, Tom and Bob, are entered in the men's singles, daughter "Jinx" in the women's singles.

Alberta District News In Brief

Fighting French Group Formed By Red Deer District People

RED DEER—An organization to aid the Fighting French movement, followers of General Charles de Gaulle, has been formed here by the French-speaking people of Red Deer and district.

B. Cayron, president of the Calgary organization, addressed a meeting in the Canadian Legion clubrooms here recently. He outlined in French the aims of the movement, which include the liberation of all subjugated nations, and all possible help, financial and moral, to the United Nations.

Following Mr. Cayron's address, the meeting voted unanimously to form an organization here. Mr. Cayron will be president of the unit which will be a sub-group of the Calgary body. Y. Duval was elected vice-president; J. DePalme, secretary; J. Tanche, Sylvan Lake, assistant secretary, and C. Lerouge, treasurer. F. C. Michiels was elected a director with Mrs. B. Trudel and Mrs. R. Gauthier as assistant directors. Votes of thanks to the Legion for use of the clubrooms were moved by Y. Duval in French and C. Lerouge in English. Fred de Launay expressed the pleasure of the Legion in helping the Fighting French movement.

RESIDENTS LEAVE FOR HOME IN EAST

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Graham and daughter, of Red Deer, have left for Windsor, Ontario, where they will make their home until the end of the war. Mr. Graham will take up war work at Windsor. The Grahams came here four years ago when Mr. Graham with his father, James Graham, took over an auto agency.

Earl Graham was a member of the Red Deer Rotary Club and a director of the Red Deer Fair and took an active share in other community activities. James Graham will continue to operate the motors business here.

President D. W. Robertson, who had been the club's delegate, gave a report on the recent Rotary convention at Toronto, at the Red Deer Rotary Club's weekly meeting. Secretary T. H. Edis read a letter which had been received from the Rotary Club of Poplar, London, England, thanking Red Deer Rotarians for a gift of money sent to help the victims in bombed-out areas.

RED DEER SCOUTS CADDYING AT BANFF

A number of Red Deer Boy Scouts are in Banff this week serving as caddies at the 13th annual Banff Golf Week, August 23 to August 29. The Red Deer group left here on Saturday morning. A total of 175 Scouts chosen by district commissioners at Edmonton, Red Deer, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, are at Banff. J. M. Castle is the district commissioner here.

At Banff the Scouts will be divided into troops with a Scoutmaster and an assistant for each troop. Record Sugar Crop Seen For Alberta

LETHBRIDGE, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Alberta's 1942 sugar beet production will start moving to the province's two processing plants shortly after the middle of next month, and is expected to yield more than 110,000,000 pounds of sugar, or about one-third of the Dominion's entire requirements for a year under the present rationing regulations.

This record-setting volume of sugar is expected from what at this time promises to become a record production of beets off the largest area ever sown to that crop in this province.

In response to appeals of the Dominion government, Alberta's sugar beet industry concentrated in the irrigated district, added 4,000 acres to the growing of beets and last spring the crop was planted on 27,800 acres.

Price Ceiling on Press is Removed

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced today removal of the over-all price ceiling from Canadian and imported newspapers, magazines and periodical publications in general, leaving the press free to adjust rates and safeguard its revenues."

The exemption applies to newsstand and street sale prices and to subscription rates. Advertising rates already are exempt.

In announcing its decision, the board said a careful survey by the administrator of publishing, printing and allied industries showed that while larger revenues had offset higher operating costs in 1940 and 1941, revenues recently had suffered a "serious decline."

"There are too many variations of circumstances to deal with each case individually so as to maintain a control of price," the board said. "Accordingly, it has been decided to remove the over-all price ceiling and leave the press free to adjust rates and safeguard its revenues too so that freedom and independence of the press may be preserved.

Envoy Praises Canuck Stand At Hong Kong

By JACK SULLIVAN

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Aug. 26.—(CP)—High praise for the bravery of Canadian troops who fought in the unsuccessful defence of Hong Kong was given yesterday by the chief United States diplomatic officer in Hong Kong during the Japanese siege of the base.

Anderson E. Southard, United States consul - general in Hong Kong, a passenger aboard the exchange ship Gripsholm which arrived here yesterday with 1,451 Canadians, Americans and others from Japan and Japanese-occupied areas in the Orient, said the fighting performance of the Canadians won the admiration of all.

MADE GREAT STAND

"The Canadians fought with great bravery and made a great showing," Southard said.

"It was too bad they had to be up against a better trained and seasoned army." The Japanese were described as first-class soldiers.

Southard said he was "in the last war and in two civil wars in Abyssinia, but there was no comparison with the Hong Kong fight—it was really tough."

Hong Kong fell to the Japanese last Christmas day. Two Canadian battalions—the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers—fought beside British and Indian troops.

Southard said that "to stop a Jap you've got to kill him—this is a damn serious war."

He did not see members of the two Canadian battalions, the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers, after the base fell. Southard said he was kept prisoner in his home where "the food wasn't too bad because we had bought it ourselves."

Among the Canadians aboard were E. D'Arcy McGreer, Canadian charge d'affaires in Tokyo; Paul McLane, trade commissioner at Hong Kong, and Mrs. McLane; Col. E. Doughty, Canadian immigration officer at Hong Kong, and V. E. Duclos, trade commissioner at Shanghai, his wife and their two children.

Eaton's Praised For Forfeiting Uniforms' Profit

OTTAWA, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Munitions Minister Howe announced yesterday receipt of a $55,000 cheque representing 1941 profits on orders placed with the T. Eaton Company, Limited, for manufacture of military uniforms.

"I wish to express the appreciation of the government and of this department for the spirit in which the manufacture of uniforms has been carried out in your Montreal plant," Mr. Howe wrote to R. Y. Eaton, president. "To manufacture these uniforms without profit is a war contribution of the first order and one that I warmly appreciate."

In December, 1940, Mr. Howe said the company returned $42,000 to the department as a result of the increased volume of work and economies effected in a new clothing factory established by the company in Montreal to manufacture uniforms.

"One of England's first citizens is no more. He was a kindly, understanding, intelligent soul. I feel his loss because of my great admiration for him personally. After he returned he wrote me a four-page letter in his own handwriting, enclosing his picture and asked me to visit him in England."

Premier Hepburn said when the Duke of Kent was driving to an air school near St. Thomas he insisted on driving the car himself and asked that no police protection be provided.

LUMBER, METAL SHORTAGE EXISTS

Farmers Urged to Provide Bins for Grain Storage

Supply Situation Is Expected to be Well In Hand During Fall

While there is a shortage of lumber and metal supplies for the construction of grain storage bins on Alberta farms this fall, it is expected the situation will be well in hand when storage accommodation is needed, it was learned from officials of the provincial department of agriculture Wednesday.

In a dispatch received from Calgary Wednesday it was stated that timber and nails for western grain storage bins represent a major problem, but controllers of such supplies are assisting farmers in meeting difficulties caused by a grain crop which promises to be one of the largest in prairie history.

Shortage of supplies is due to the wartime demand for timber and metal.

H. H. Ross, Edmonton, is timber controller for Edmonton.

"We are not sure of the size of the crop yet so we don't know exactly what will be needed in the way of storage supplies," an official of the department of agriculture stated. "We expect the situation will be well in hand, and we are gratified that we have received so few complaints from farmers in this connection. The timber controller is giving us considerable help in meeting demands for storage equipment."

USE 1940 SUPPLIES

Farmers are being urged to make use of lumber supplies remaining on their farms and to restore every bin of the type used in 1940 when an extensive grain storage construction program was undertaken.

Suggestions for storing grain crops on the farm are contined in a circular now available at the extension branch of the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

THE QUESTION

Do you think that Brazil's course in declaring war on the Axis partners will influence the whole continent?

THE ANSWERS

GORDON WHITLA, clerk: Such declaration is bound to have an influence on the whole continent, and specially on the South American republics. Up until now the war has seemed remote from the Southern Hemisphere, just as the first Great War was. It will be different now.

V

FRANK SMITHSON, salesman: This is another instance of Germany's political blundering. There was nothing to gain and much to lose through the indiscriminate sinking of vessels off the South American coast. Had the U-boat commanders restricted their activities to vessels of countries already arraigned against the Axis, the South American republics might have remained quiescent. The whole course of the war is bound to be influenced by the action.

V

TIM WALLER, clerk: The Axis powers will be adversely affected by this action. Their trade will be hampered and their manoeuvres in sister republics will be seriously crippled. These countries are lining up with Brazil and even Argentina appears uneasy and uncertain regarding neutrality. South American countries will no longer be a fertile plotting ground for Axis partners.

Britain has suffered the loss of a highly competent military leader in the tragic death of His Royal Highness The Duke of Kent, the Edmonton area commandant, Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., stated Wednesday.

"I am greatly shocked at the death of the Duke of Kent," he said. "I had the great pleasure of meeting him when he visited Edmonton last year. Although he was here on air force business at that time he evinced the keenest interests in matters concerning the army here. He asked me many questions about the military set-up in this area. He also told me that the British people were deeply grateful to Canada for the great effort the Dominion was putting forth in the common cause.

"The Duke remarked that the Canadian Army overseas was creating a splendid impression in Britain," Lt.-Col. Brown concluded.

Duke of Kent Keenly Interested In North, Recalls Capt. 'Wop' May

Death of His Royal Highness Air Commodore the Duke of Kent, came as a stunning shock to Capt. W. R. "Wop" May, O.B.E., D.F.C., First World War ace, and at present manager of No. 2 Air Observers' School here.

Capt. May feels that he has personally lost an airman buddy.

On two occasions that the Duke of Kent visited Edmonton, Capt. May had long chats with the flying duke. Several years ago the Edmonton airman drove His Royal Highness around the city when he visited Edmonton with the present Duke of Windsor, then His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

Then when the Duke of Kent visited Edmonton last summer on his tour of British Commonwealth Air Training establishments, Capt. May had another long talk with His Royal Highness.

SHOCKED AT NEWS

"I am certainly greatly shocked to hear of the death of the Duke of Kent. He was a keen airman and a fine genuinely conversationalist," Capt. May declared.

"He was keenly interested in the north. When he was here last summer he talked with me for about an hour about the north country. He was very much interested in the future of the north as a mining area. He showed a wide knowledge of the country and was particularly interested in the development of that section of Canada from the standpoint of metals," Capt. May continued.

"The Duke also wanted me to tell him all about the experiences of the bush pilots flying in the cold weather of the northern winters. He had a very good understanding of aeronautics and was himself a qualified pilot. I feel that Canada has suffered a great loss and I personally feel I have suffered the loss of a good friend and fellow airman," Capt. May concluded.

The Duke of Kent conducted a careful inspection of No. 2 Air Observers' School and No. 16 Elementary Flying Training School that was then operating in the city.

CHATTED WITH STUDENTS

He chatted with dozens of student pilots and student observers from all parts of the Empire and the United States while at the airport grounds. Later he paid a visit to No. 4 Initial Training School on the south side and was a guest at the officers' mess, where many of the officers were presented to him.

Two Fined For Not Returning After Crash

Two motorists who failed to return to the scene of accidents were fined when they appeared in city police court Wednesday.

Frank Otte, 10206 114 street, was fined $10 and costs after pleading guilty to his charge and Mike Yasinsky, 12672 72 street, was fined $15 and costs after Police Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., found him guilty of failing to stop at the corner of 109 street and 97 avenue after jumping the sidewalk curb and striking a pedestrian with the front wheel of his auto.

A charge of dangerous driving against Yasinsky was dismissed.

William Rechik was fined $20 and costs for failing to notify Dominion authorities of his change of address within 14 days after he changed his place of residence.

Harold Rae, 18-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty to the theft of an auto, received a suspended sentence for two years.

City is Obtaining Needed Materials

No difficulty is being experienced by the City of Edmonton in getting priorities for materials essential to carrying on the civic business, if a clear explanation of the need and use to which the materials are to be put is given when the application is made, A. A. Campbell, city comptroller, stated Wednesday.

As an instance of the co-operation received from the Priority Board at Ottawa a telegram was sent Thursday to the board asking for priority on certain cable needed for airport extension work. The order permitting the purchase of the cable was received on the Saturday morning.

There have been cases of delay in the granting of priority in certain applications, but this delay was usually occasioned through lack of information as to the use to which the material was to be assigned.

Prisoners Will Gather Jail Crops

Although prisoners are to be released in some provinces to assist in the harvest, it is not likely that any will be here, as there are so few prisoners in Alberta jails that all will be needed to gather the harvest on their own jail farms.

Provincial government officials, queried Wednesday on the subject, declared that all available prisoner help will be required on farms on prison territory.

Lauds Royal Airman

Capt. W. R. "Wop" May, O.B.E., D.F.C., manager of No. 2 Air Observers School here, feels the death of His Royal Highness Air Commodore the Duke of Kent very keenly. The Duke conversed with Capt. May at length over the future of Canada's great northland.

Getting Around
with Jack DeLong

Canadians mourn this day the death in action of His Royal Highness Air Commodore the Duke of Kent.

It is only slightly more than one year ago that The Duke paid a visit to Edmonton during an inspection tour of British Commonwealth Air Training Plan establishments in Canada.

To all who had the pleasant experience of meeting the royal air commodore on that occasion, a pleasant memory of a slim, handsome and courteous airman will remain.

Newsmen assigned to cover his visit, the conductor of this column among them, marvelled at the never-failing patience and sunny smile of the Royal visitor.

The Duke was occupied every moment from the moment he arrived here on a C.N.R. train early in the afternoon until he departed on a special train from the C.P.R. station shortly after 6 p.m., and not once did he act as if the tough schedule was at all tiring.

Himself a competent pilot, Air Commodore Kent spoke the new language of the men of the skies. His death, at the age of 39, is tragic even at a time when the tragedy of sudden death for the young has become tragically common.

But in dying, as he did, at his post in the control room of an R.A.F. Sunderland patrol bomber, Air Commodore Kent rejoined in a comradeship of glory those gallant youths of the R.A.F. who sacrificed life that Britain might live in those dark summer days of 1940.

And if death had to come, there is something majestically appropriate that the brother of His Majesty The King, should be himself of that gallant band of which Prime Minister Churchill said:

"Never have so many owed so much to so few."

And in the death of His Royal Highness it is demonstrated anew that posts of great danger are again taken by those of royal kin as in the stirring days of the early British monarchs.

V

Those of the Royal House of Windsor have become equal partners with those who mourn soldier sons, brothers and fathers in all parts of the British Commonwealth and in all nations forming the United Nations' front against the enemies of mankind.

Rain Hampers Test Pick-Up Salvage Drive

Rain hampered the test pick-up of salvage from homes in the Norwood area Tuesday evening. Out of 900 homes in the territory under test, only 127 places had their salvage materials at the front curb when the salvage trucks came along.

Jack Weber, salvage campaign chairman, stated Wednesday that inquiries at some of the homes where salvage was not available revealed that in most cases it was ready but that it was not placed outside owing to the rain.

He emphasized that in future the salvage trucks will be on hand as scheduled, rain or shine. With paper not needed at present, there are no materials that may be damaged by rain.

V

SHOW INTEREST

Example of the interest shown in the pick-ups may be seen from the results obtained along 96 street where 63 were made from 120 homes in spite of the rain.

Mr. Weber believes that residents along the other streets covered Tuesday were ready in about the same proportion but that their materials were not at the curb.

The area covered included 900 homes between 95 and 102 streets, and between 111 and 118 avenues. Five trucks and 18 members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce participated.

Groups Asking Four Tag Days For Servicemen

Application will be made to the Edmonton Tag Day Advisory Committee by the executives of several city organized auxiliaries for permission to hold at least four tag days to obtain funds to send comforts to soldiers overseas. The committee will meet in the council chamber, civic block, on Thursday at 4 p.m.

Under a recent order issued from Ottawa all previous regulations governing the packing, marking, shipping and delivery of comforts supplied by regimental auxiliaries, should be cancelled and the following regulations substituted:

"The Red Cross is prepared to accept for transport to Great Britain supplies which could be delivered to its national or divisional warehouse in Canada, where such supplies will be the subject of inspection and then packed for shipment.

"Regimental comforts shall not include food of any kind, tobacco, cigarettes, matches, lighter fluid, and alcoholic liquors. Each list of supplies should be accompanied with the following information, name of unit and location; list of supplies with values; and name and address of the sender.

HOW TO ADDRESS

"Cases when packed must be addressed to the officer commanding the regiment and must be for free distribution amongst the men under his command. The Red Cross representatives in London, England, will be advised by mail, by the national transportation committee of the Society, giving the case number and other necessary information in order that they may arrange quick delivery.

"The Red Cross assumes no responsibility for the condition of cases or arrival or for non-delivery. Supplies cannot be delivered outside of Great Britain."

At the last meeting of the Tag Day Advisory Committee it was agreed that one tag day be allotted to the regimental auxiliaries, and that a drive for support from business and industrial concerns be staged in conjunction with the tag day. It is understood that this suggestion is not acceptable to the executives of the regimental auxiliaries and a request is being made for at least four tag days this fall.

Appeals Sentence By Police Court

Appeal was filed Wednesday by James John Conley, transient, against conviction and four-month sentence imposed on him by Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., on an intoxication charge.

Conley's letter to R. P. Wallace, K.C., clerk of the appellate court, Conley asserts that he was convicted on evidence that was untrue and that "the arresting constable testified that he had seen (Conley) around town for several weeks when he had only been released from jail a few days previous to the arrest." The intending appellant intimates that when this statement came before the court he pointed out that he had only been released from a jail a few days, and consequently the statement was untrue. He then asserts that Magistrate Millar had replied "the witness was only a young constable and wasn't wised up to the rules of evidence."

Conley complains also of other statements made by the arresting officer, and asks for assistance in having a transcript made of the evidence taken at the police court.

Long Engagements Should Be Avoided

It Is Regarded as One of the Most Dangerous Experiences; Many Get Tired of Waiting For the Wedding Day

In these war times, when so many of the boys who are going to the front are asking girls to wait for them, the question of the long engagement becomes paramount to both men and women. Much, of course, is to be said on both sides of the subject.

There is the sentimental angle that makes the girl feel she will be bound closer to the boy and more sure of him if she is fettered to him by an engagement ring; even if the engagement never ends in marriage she will have had her little bit of romance to remember as long as she lives. And for the boy it answers the eternal masculine demand for some woman who belongs to him, who will be watching and waiting and praying for his return, and who will make all the hardships and dangers he has to undergo worthwhile because he will feel that he is fighting for HER.

And there is the realistic angle that makes them both know that at their time of life they are in a state of flux, when their emotions and their tastes are unstable, and that they are making vows they may not be able to keep. They know that the war will change them both and that when they meet again they may not even want each other. So the more prudent of them wonder just how wise it is to gamble on a future that is so uncertain.

GIVES WARNING

Now, being a sentimentalist myself, I hate to disturb love's young dreams by warning the youths and maidens who are thinking of entering into a long engagement that it is one of the most dangerous and generally disastrous experiences which a human being can undertake. It calls for a patience, a perseverance, a lack of imagination, a staidness and a general adhesiveness that few of us possess. Love loses its freshness if kept too long waiting. The wedding food should be eaten while it is still hot. Otherwise it is as flat and tasteless as any other meal that has been too long cooking.

A long engagement is a hazardous venture, whether a couple are separated or whether they live on the same street. If they are parted, it is almost inevitable that they should grow away from each other and lose interest in each other, and that when they come together again they are disappointed and disillusioned. They have had different experiences, been in a different environment, known different people, and they meet as strangers who have nothing to say to each other and who bore each other because they no longer have anything in common. They are not even fair in their judgement of each other because each has built up, in separation, an ideal Prince Charming or Glamor Girl who really never existed.

On the other hand, if the engaged couple see each other continually, week after week and year after year, they wear off the bloom of romance because romance is an airy-fairy thing made of dreams that will not endure being hacked about.

Also an engaged couple stand to each other in an anomalous position that gets on the nerves of both. They are neither bond nor free. They cannot even define to themselves what are their duties and obligations to each other, and so they face a condition that is peculiarly full of jealousies and misunderstandings and bickerings.

Furthermore, we naturally get tired of waiting for a thing too long, no matter how much we want it at first; so love and romance peter out. And when the long-engaged couple finally do get married, it is only too often just because they have become a habit to each other and because everybody expected it of them, rather than because they desire it themselves.

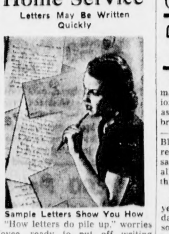

GETS COLD FEET

Many a man stumbles to the altar on cold feet because when he left home to seek his fortune he asked some girl to wait for him and after as the phrase goes, "she had given him the best years of her life" keeping her promise to him, he felt in honor bound to marry her, and knew that all their friends and acquaintances would consider him a heel if he didn't. And many a woman marries a man she has been engaged to so long that she has lost her taste for him just because he is her only salvation from being an old maid, and the things in her hope chest are getting yellow with age. But there is no happiness in such marriages.

So I would say to all youngsters who are debating the long engagement problem: Don't. Wait until you are ready to marry. Then choose your mate.

Sample Letters Show You How

"How letters do pile up," worries Joyce, ready to put off writing again because she can't think how to begin, what to say.

A great pity to lose friends that way! Easy to write quickly, charmingly with hints from sample letters by good writers.

No hesitating, then, over that note of thanks to Margie for her gift. Tripplingly you write, "Darling of you to send me that exquisite lamp —it's a bright spot in my room."

With correct forms before you you quickly answer the tea invitation written on Mrs. Grey's visiting card. Using the third person, you begin, "Miss Joyce Jones accepts with pleasure . . ."

That letter of introduction is simple when you have a guide at hand. Tactfully you write "An old friend, Alice Graham, is moving to Middleton. She's devoted to

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

The early morning feedings, at 2 a.m. or thereabouts, are the ones which should be dispensed with early. When the baby is first home from the hospital it may be convenient to nurse or bottle-feed at 10 and 2; but at two or three months, if the baby is allowed to sleep until he wakens to be fed, it will be found that his tendency is to sleep through the 10 p.m. feeding, waken about 12 and then sleep until morning. One cannot respect this tendency unless one is willing to allow the baby to sleep and refuse to waken him for a feeding.

When this change is taking place it is very likely that just at first the baby will not sleep until the dot of 6 a.m. This always worries his schedule-conscious young mother. It need not. If he wakens at 5, feed him. After such a lengthy sleep he will be in no mood to be put off longer. Then his next feeding may come at 9.30 and the third one at 2, thus putting him back on schedule again.

Usually this tendency to waken before the first morning meal is just a temporary one. It is, moreover, the only way in which we can accustom the baby to doing without night feedings. If wakened regularly he continues to waken regularly whether he needs the food or not.

The really important thing is the daytime nourishment. If that is satisfying to the baby he will be happier for long hours of uninterrupted sleep and as for his mother—she luxuriates in them.

The nursing mother may find it more comfortable to nurse the baby once between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. And it must be made clear that if the baby wakens of his own accord he should be fed. Some babies demand a night feeding until they are older than others and there is no more reason why they should be denied it than that sleepy babies should be shaken awake at 10 p.m. —just because it is 10 p.m.—and forced to eat.

Left alone after the 6 p.m feeding to eat or sleep as he pleases the well-fed baby will be found ready to abandon night feedings early. He should be fed regularly in the daytime and if he is still being fed at night at six months, there may be something improvable about the day-time feedings. It is a mistake to imagine that babies have to be fed at night, too many of them grow and thrive with only the four generous daytime meals.

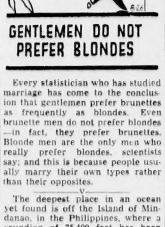

Our leaflet, "The First Six Weeks," indicates the average schedules for the average baby. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

GENTLEMEN DO NOT PREFER BLONDES

Every statistician who has studied marriage has come to the conclusion that gentlemen prefer brunettes as frequently as blondes. Even brunette men do not prefer blondes —in fact, they prefer brunettes. Blonde men are the only men who really prefer blondes, scientists say; and this is because people usually marry their own types rather than their opposites.

Horse Show to Aid Work for Canadian Navy

CONTINUING a wartime program of holding gymkhanas and riding shows in aid of the war effort, the Northern Alberta Light Horse Society is presenting a benefit horse show September 4 and 5 in the Edmonton Exhibition Association's enclosure on the west side of the Exhibition grounds.

Taking as their incentive the outstanding success of other similar events in Edmonton, when the various Saddle clubs raised over $1,200 for the three armed services, the Society has invited the Lady Aberdeen League to be co-sponsors and help with arrangements. Proceeds will go to help the Lady Aberdeen League with their work for the navy.

Several cups have been offered for competition in the events. For the winner of the children's jumping class, Mrs. D. K. Yorath, formerly Miss Betty Wilkin, is donating a cup. Mrs. W. R. May and Miss Willa Sandison have also put up cups for children's competitions.

Mr. W. E. Pixley of Penhold has offered a trophy for the pinto pony harness pony. For the rider of the winning lady's saddle horse and also the champion saddle pony the Edmonton Saddle club is offering trophies.

Fruit goes well in the salad bowl too. If you've not already tried it, you'll be agreeably surprised if you combine on crisp mixed salad greens, strips of fully ripe bananas, celery curls, radishes, tomatoes and a little onion. Serve with French dressing made with orange and grapefruit juice instead of vinegar.

Proxy Wedding Arouses Wide Discussion

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The case of a 22-year-old "proxy" bridegroom, Frederick James Higgins, who "married" an A.T.S. girl in his brother's name has brought the whole question of marriage by proxy to the fore.

The matrimonial tangle of this Royal Fusiliers private was disclosed when he and the bride, 19-year-old Margaret Lloyd, were each fined $4.50 for making a false statement on a marriage register.

It developed that in April Frederick went to the church to act as best man at the wedding of his brother Ernest. Ernest did not turn up because he was on his way to Madagscar with his regiment. Rather than have the ceremony fail through Frederick decided to marry Miss Lloyd in his brother's name.

Now he is a worried young man. He doesn't know whether he is legally married nor how he is going to explain the position to his own girl friend.

The case received publicity in the London press where the situation was discussed pro and con.

School Pupils To Aid Kiddies In Gt. Britain

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—A scheme to link the school children of cities, towns and villages of Britain with children living in places of similar names in Canada and the United States bids well to be an overwhelming success.

Organized by Hilda Lady Butterfield, the plan, known as the "Children of the Fighting Forces," has a two-fold purpose—to help join the peoples of the three countries by a common bond of friendship and to provide for needy children in Britain.

Mayors, peanut vendors and others in cities and towns of the three countries have volunteered to co-operate in an effort to have school children in Canada and the United States gather materials for school children in the British places of the same name. Since the scheme was launched about 40,000 girls have been provided with wool and materials which they have fashioned into garments for families of men serving in the army and who are in need of help.

KEEP IN TOUCH

The idea is spreading rapidly, but Lady Butterfield has a long list of schools in Aberdeen, Perth, Halifax, Hull and others from Edinburgh to London waiting to be linked with places in Canada and the United States.

"Mayor Clifford Peoples of Chester, Pa., has begun one of the biggest movements in the United States," said Lady Butterfield. "The school children there provide the children of Chester, Eng., with large quantities of material.

"The children of the two cities now write to each other about their lives and in this way both countries are learning more about each other's history."

Temperature Same As One Year Ago

Citizens who are placing August, 1942, in their memory as an unusually cold and wet month, will be interested in knowing that on Aug. 26, 1941, recorded temperatures were almost the same as those of Wednesday.

Maximum temperature during the 24-hour period prior to 10 a.m. was 53 above, and the lowest temperature was 46. Last year, for the same period, the maximum was 58 above, and the minimum was 44 above.

Precipitation does not show the same comparison, however, as Aug. 26, 1941, there was no rainfall in Edmonton, while this date there has been 81 inches during this 24-hour period.

British Planes Hit Axis Transports

CAIRO, Aug. 26.—(AP)—British planes have struck from an airfield transport in the Mediterranean and attacked a land convoy moving reinforcements over the Salum-Sollum road toward the enemy front lines in North Africa, the army headquarters' A.M. communique said today. Otherwise the Egyptian front was quiet.

What To Do

8-24

May I use place mats for a guest dinner, or is a full sized table cloth more formal?

Answer—Don't even consider the "formality" of the setting you use. Look at your table and decide which you like best. Consider the size and shape of your table, the number of guests to be seated—and particularly the finish on your table top.

If you think the mats look "spotty" or if the table top is marred, by all means use the full cloth. If your place mats are particularly handsome ones, and your table top the right shape and unblemished, by all means use the mats.

$90,000 Mark Objective of Chest Drive

Edmonton's second annual Community Chest campaign will be held Sept. 22 to October 3, Harvey Harrison, president of the Edmonton Community Chest, announced Wednesday. Campaign objective has been set at $90,000. This is the amount of funds that the budget committee has declared necessary for the operation of 27 city social agencies associated with the chest for the forthcoming year.

Funds raised during the campaign will be used for operational expenses for the 28 agencies in 1943. Julian Garrett is chairman of the budget committee that reviewed the work of the agencies during the past six months and used the findings as a guide for setting the 1943 budget figure.

Elmer E. Roper will be the general campaign chairman and he will be assisted by the following branch chairmen: Fred J. Reynolds, industrial-commercial section; Rowan McKenzie, chairman of the business division; Mrs. S. H. Gandier, chairman of the women's division.

NEED REMAINS

Mr. Harrison pointed out that a greater measure of employment does not necessarily curtail the demands on welfare agencies, particularly where the employment means that the wage-earner has left home for service in the armed forces or as a worker in an industrial plant elsewhere.

Rather frequently this causes a serious welfare problem in which welfare agencies and character building agencies have their part to play. One agency, dealing in family welfare, reports more than 40 per cent of its work is done with families, the husbands from which have gone overseas or are on active service in other parts of Canada, the president stated.

The problem of juvenile delinquency is again receiving its ugly head and character building agencies are massing their resources in order to meet this challenge, he said.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind reports increased demand for its services. The outbreak of the war and its continuance does not in any way diminish the need for assistance to those who through no fault of their own, are blinded and except where the vocational service and training is offered, are unable to carry on unaided, he pointed out.

CHILD PROBLEM SERIOUS

He added that child welfare agencies, particularly those which supply food, shelter and clothing to orphaned and bereft children, are finding increased difficulty in maintaining services little unfortunates because of the increased cost of food and clothing.

"It is further pointed out that those who have a stake in order to fight for the preservation of the freedom which we enjoy, have left a trust in our hands to maintain the home front, so that they may return and find at least one front that is undented and held firm," he said.

Campaign headquarters have been set up at 10116 103 street and workers are now being recruited for the campaign effort.

LIST OF AGENCIES

Following is the list of agencies associated with the Community Chest for 1943:

Alberta Council, Girl Guide Association; Alberta Protestant Home for Children; All People's Mission of the United Church of Canada, Beulah Home; Boy Scouts' Association; Canadian National Institute for the Blind; Catholic Women's League; Church of England Diocesan Council for Social Service; Edmonton and District Boy's Work Board; Edmonton Creche Society; Edmonton Council of Social Agencies; Edmonton Girls' Work Board; Edmonton Jewish Welfare Fund.

City Forwards Sympathy For Duke of Kent

tions of human relationships after the war.

"Personally, I was greatly impressed with him, and he in turn was tremendously impressed with Canada and its possibilities. I feel certain it is a great loss to England and to the empire that he was taken so suddenly, and especially to his young family.

PREMIER ABERHART: The Alberta premier joins with those in other provinces and people in many lands in voicing deep sympathy over the sudden death of His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent.

He was no stranger to the people of Alberta. On such occasions he had visited this province and received the enthusiastic welcome of our people. On his visit only last year, he had endeared to this government his deep appreciation of the welcome accorded to him in Alberta.

The Duke of Kent had an outstanding record of public service, though still a young man. Since the war, he did his utmost to further the Allied cause, serving, just as other members of the royal family are, in the air force of his country.

He was quick to perceive the value of the commonwealth air training scheme and that it is an important factor in bringing victory to the Allies. Undaunted by the dangers of ocean travel in wartime, he came to Canada personally to look into the progress of the scheme and toured the dominion from coast to coast.

He came into personal contact with many of our citizens, winning their admiration and profound respect, and giving them inspiration.

The ravages of war are unsparing and take the high and the low. The duke's death is another demonstration of the resolve of democracy to spare no effort to win this war, even though this entails great sacrifice.

In his province, which has great affection for this noble man, we mourn the Duke of Kent and extend our sympathy to the royal family.

MAYOR FRY: I was shocked to hear of the death of the Duke of Kent who has been in the forefront of those striving for victory for the Allied cause. Personally, I did not have the honor of meeting the duke when he visited Edmonton last year as I was away on vacation at the time. However, I was informed of the great interest he took in the development of this city and particularly in the empire air training scheme and centres being developed here. Edmonton citizens will mourn the loss of one who held the deep respect and admiration of all in the death of the Duke of Kent.

Are Apple Assets Minerals and Vitamins

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Summer apples, arriving in large quantities and selling at reasonable prices, are well supplied with essential minerals and, in general, are good sources of vitamins B. C and G, and have a small amount of A.

Many growers are leaving the apples on the tree longer before picking. That increases the content of natural sugar, and these apples, picked later, require less sugar for sweetening when cooked in pies and puddings and sauces.

Select apples that are firm and free from decay or bruises, according to use. Buy sour apples for cooking and sweet apples for salads and desserts.

APPLE COLD SLAW
(Serves 4)

One quart shredded cabbage, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 red-skinned apple, chopped, ¼ cup salad dressing.

Add seasoning to cabbage and marinate in vinegar for 5 minutes. Add apple and salad dressing and serve.

Tomatoes stuffed with apples and vegetables call for what you have left over in the refrigerator. Wash tomatoes, remove stem ends but do not peel. Scrape out some of the pulp (save for soup) and invert tomatoes to drain. Sprinkle with salt and stuff lightly with chopped cooked spinach, chopped raw apple, with skin left on, and enough shaved cheese to hold mixture together. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 30 minutes.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Orange juice, dry whole wheat cereal, nut muffins, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Tomatoes stuffed with apples, vegetables and cheese, rye bread, stewed blackberries, tea, milk.

Dinner: Braised lamb shoulder chops, mashed potatoes, green corn, peaches and pecan tea cookies, peach shortcake, coffee, milk.

I ESCAPED FROM A JAP PRISON CAMP

Wholesale Transfer Canucks To North Point Prison Camp

Lt. Benjamin Proulx, Canadian Naval Reserve officer, escaped from a Japanese prison camp on Hong Kong Island after 40 days of imprisonment. In a series of 12 articles he tells of the British surrender at Hong Kong, his life in the prison camp, his desperate decision to escape and his first days of freedom. In the following article he tells how he planned his escape.—EDITOR.

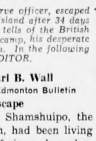

By Benjamin Proulx as Told to Cpl B. Wall

Instalment IV: I Plan My Escape

Each of the seven thousand of us in Shamshuipo, the Japanese military prison camp in Kawloon, had been living for eighteen days on sixteen tablespoons of rice a day when some of the men began to look around for something else to eat.

There was a huge, mongrel Chinese dog running around the prison yard. He must have stood about thirty-eight or forty inches and probably weighed about forty or forty-five pounds. He had a rough light brown coat and ears that stood up straight the way those of a police dog do.

PROULX

I don't know where he came from. He didn't belong to anyone in the camp and probably just wandered in with us when the Japanese herded us through the barbed wire. I don't know how he lived for those eighteen days either. You can't get any scraps out of a bowl of rice and I never saw anyone feeding him.

But he must have been getting something from somewhere—probably rats—because he didn't seem to be getting as scrawny as the men. In fact, I heard some of the men say that the dog was getting fatter and fatter but I think it was just their imagination.

There were two men in the camp who kept looking at the dog quite a bit. They were husky men who were used to eating three square meals a day with maybe a quart of beer or a few scotch and sodas in between. They were both army privates and were members of an anti-aircraft unit which had been stationed in Hong Kong.

One day one said to me:

"If I had a sharp knife, I'd skin that dog and we'd have a meal."

I was hungry but I didn't feel like taking him up. It wasn't that I was too elegant or anything like that. It was just that I didn't feel like eating dog. But a while later noticed that there was no dog running around the camp.

I asked about it later on. I was told that the two pirates and a few others had killed it and roasted the meat over one of the fires on which they boiled the rice.

LITTLE SWEET

"It was all right," he said. "It was a little sweet but it was all right."

That was the way things went in the Shamshuipo camp for the 30 days from December 26 to January 24. There were no lights whatever inside the barbed wire, and at dusk which usually came at that time of the year at about 7:45 or 8 o'clock, I would lie down on the floor of my quarters and try to go to sleep.

Sometimes at night when I could not go to sleep right away, I would manage to get a piece of candle from one of the men and sit up for a while copying hymns. Or I would stand at the small window and look out over the darkness of Hong Kong harbor.

But all of this time, no matter what I was doing, I was thinking of escape. There were rumors around the prison that all of us were to be taken into Japan, and I knew that once this happened there would be even less chance of getting away than there was here. And it was bad enough here.

The layout of the camp was always the same. All the way across Victoria harbor to Hong Kong Island, our small boats were under the guns of Japanese patrol boats and with us were the ever present little men with the little bayonets.

At dusk we were being herded through the barbed wire of the North Point prison camp on the northern end of Hong Kong Island. I had heard about this place before. For the last two years, Chinese refugees had huddled there in flimsy wooden huts. I guess they thought they would be safe there from the Japanese invaders.

I don't know what happened to them when the Japanese came to Hong Kong. They weren't there when we got there but the wooden huts were and the floors were filthy and there was blood on them.

When the Chinese lived there in the huts there had been less than two thousand men, women and children. The Japanese put 3,000 of us in the same huts. The camp was about one-third the size of Shamshuipo. It was rectangular in shape and about the same layout. There was barbed wire around three sides and a seawall on the fourth. There were the same machine guns and sentries with bayonets.

FLIES EVERYWHERE

There were crude latrines at both ends. One of them filtered through to the sea. We got there in the early dusk and even then I could see the flies. There were clouds of them. They were over everything. They came from the open latrines and swarmed over your face. There were so many of them that they filled the dusk with a humming sound like the drone of a giant electric fan.

The rice was the same. Everything was the same. The days, the nights, the mornings. Only now we did not even have hymn books to copy.

But on the afternoon of my second day in the North Point prison, I began to see a way in which an escape might possibly be made. I talked to many men about it. They did not think it would work. They had been on rice for so long that it seemed better not to try anything. And they had been listening to that "secret" radio in Shamshuipo with its wonderful news of British victories.

I talked to a man about it. I will not give his name. He is still in the camp and you cannot tell what the Japanese will do to him. He said:

"You know what it means if they get you."

I said that I knew. They would kill me. Then I rolled back what was left of my shirt sleeves and showed him my arms.

LOSS OF WEIGHT

They were so thin that I could put my thumb and forefinger around them above the elbow. There was no flesh on them. It seemed that there was no flesh on me anywhere. I knew that when I was taken prisoner I weighed 136 pounds. It did not seem to me that I could weigh more than a hundred now.

"I will have to make some kind of a break pretty soon," I said. "If I wait much longer I will be too weak to make the try or I will be dead."

The doctors had told us we could live for six months on the rice diet if we took good care of ourselves. "ways in my head. When I closed my eyes at night, it was there—sharply etched like the negative of a photograph. The great square with the three sides hemmed in by the barbed wire and the seawall at the front rising steeply from the harbor waters. The Japanese machine gunners and the sentries all around. I could not see any way out, but I could not stop thinking about it.

Late in the afternoon of January 24, the short, squat men with the long arms and machine guns and bayonets came for us. We were lined up in the prison yard. Our own officers conferred with Japanese officers and their interpreters—there were always interpreters. The men with the machine guns stood slouched and hunched.

It was a wholesale transfer. All naval officers, men and Canadians were to leave the camp. We were to leave at once. That was all.

DIDN'T HAVE CHANCE

The Japanese would not say where they were taking us. We were leaving. That was all they would say. So most of us thought it would be Japan and we began trying to figure out some way to make a break for it. But the brown men kept close to us with the bayonets and machine guns. We didn't have a chance. And we had been living on 16 tablespoons of rice for 30 days. We had all we could do to walk and to keep our bodies away from the bayonets.

We shuffled down to the waterfront. And then I saw that it was not to be Japan after all for they were loading us into small launches. All the way across Victoria harbor to Hong Kong Island, our small boats were under the guns of Japanese patrol boats and with us were the ever present little men with the little bayonets.

I don't know what happened to them when the Japanese came to Hong Kong. They weren't there when we got there but the wooden huts were and the floors were filthy and there was blood on them.

Kiwanians Pay Press Tribute Week of Oct. 1-7

SASKATOON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Robert J. Prittie, past international vice-president of Kiwanis International, announced to the delegates at the annual convention of western Canada district Tuesday that the week of Oct. 1 to 7 would be a week in which all Kiwanis clubs would pay tribute to the press of North America.

He told the Kiwanians that, in his opinion, the press of Canada and the United States was more free than that of any other country.

"It is my sincere belief that when the press of a country is less free than ours, the country is headed for the rocks," he declared.

"There has been talk of a capitalistic press and that the press is not free. I said that our press is more free than in any other country and we must be certain that it retains that freedom," he added.

He told the delegates that before anyone talked "about getting more publicity," they should have something to offer. He urged them to consider what the press meant to the people in conveying to them all their news.

"I think that anyone connected with the editorial staffs of the press, though you may not agree with their opinions, is doing a high-class job today," he said, telling the clubs to make the most of their opportunity to pay tribute to the country's newspapers.

Owe $788 Rent: Court Refuses Eviction Order

CALGARY, Aug. 26.—(CP)—Tenants at a Calgary house owe their landlord, John H. Jones, $788 rental arrears, but the owner's application to obtain possession of the house was dismissed by Mr. Justice W. R. Howson in supreme court yesterday.

His Lordship told Mr. Jones that under rent control regulations, he must give three months' notice before obtaining possession of the property.

Since June, 1933, the house has been occupied by Mrs. Margaret Colossi and her eight children, court was informed. As a result of rental payments less than the rental of $20 a month, the arrears have accumulated.

Britain Urged to Open India Parley

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(CP)—The Dean of Canterbury, Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, suggested yesterday that Britain take the initiative in reopening negotiations with the All-India Congress Party to solve the Indian problem. He spoke to a meeting sponsored by the India League to urge renewed talks.

The Dean proposed the release of detained Indian leaders and restoration of such liberties as the of Uruguayan ports. Enemy aliens reaching Uruguay will be subject to extradition proceedings, and deported to Brazil, there to be dealt with as their actions deserve.

The accompanying map shows how, by the inclusion of more and more states in the ranks of the United Nations and by the acquisition of bases, and the occupation of strategic areas, the Allies have steadily already forged a chain of communications which gives them firm military control over the western hemisphere to the South Atlantic and a short projected route to Africa.

ANCIENT TORTOISE

The giant tortoise of Mauritius spent 160 years on the island before it was removed to England. The age of the reptile is unknown since it was of great size when brought to Mauritius from Aldabra.

The War Today

By JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

The most important addition to the economic and tactical strength of the United Nations has been made by the entry of Brazil into the war on the Allied side. The population of Brazil is about equal to that of the British Isles, and the territory within Brazilian borders is larger in area than that of the United States without Alaska. Much of this territory is undeveloped and overgrown with tropical vegetation and badly served by transportation.

Even so, Brazil is extremely rich in agricultural crops and mineral resources, particularly iron and manganese, which are valuable to the munitions industry. Lack of coal, and hence coke, for smelting has limited the commercial value of these mineral deposits, but in the emergency of war, where commercial profits are of secondary importance and vital shortages have developed, the addition of these resources to the Allied pool is of great advantage.

Apart from her manpower and riches, Brazil is important to the allied cause by reason of her location. From Recife or Forteleza, it is a scant fifteen hundred miles by water to Freetown, and the full participation of Brazil in the Allied strategy of war will facilitate the development of military routes by air and sea to Africa.

In the past few weeks the Axis war against Allied shipping has moved from the Caribbean to the South Atlantic. It is certain that Axis agents operating in Brazil have been playing an indispensible part in the submarine campaign both by signalling information of shipping movements and refueling small vessels loaded with fuel and supplies out to rendezvous with the U-boats.

FLEE TO URUGUAY

The declaration of war gives the Brazilian government power to deal with such of its citizens as are of enemy origin. There are nearly a million Germans in Brazil, and about a seventh of the population is Italian. These circumstances made the country a happy hunting ground for spies, saboteurs, propagandists and political agents whose mission it was to prepare Brazil as the next continuing to be neutral Axis intrusion into this hemisphere.

Brazil's declaration of war is already sending dozens of these enemy aliens, whose activities are open to question, across the border into Uruguay. But they were not being received kindly in Uruguay. At any moment, the Uruguayan Government may follow Brazil's lead and declare war. Already it has shown its practical sympathy with Brazil by declaring its neighbour as a non-belligerent, which means that Brazilian warships and aircraft can make unrestricted use

EVERY TRICK TRIED

With about fifty more days of good fighting weather remaining, the Russians are still clinging tenaciously to their positions west of Stalingrad, northwest of Grozny, and in the foothills of the northwest Caucasus. There is no denying, however, that the fate of Stalingrad is hanging in the balance. Time after time the German attacks have been broken, but still the enemy persists. More reserves are thrown in to fill the gaps made by the dead; damaged tanks are pulled out of the action, swiftly repaired and thrown back in again, and the attack takes a dozen different forms to bewilder the defenders.

Every trick known to the German tactition has been tried. Flying wedges of armor have been used to screen infantry assaults. Diversion attacks have been made by parachute troops. Infantry has been pushed into the fray to draw the Russians into close conflict, only, to part and let tanks and self-propelled artillery smash directly into the exposed Russian formations.

ANXIOUS WEEKS AHEAD

But so far all these ruses have failed to gain spectacular advances or achieve decisive results. Nevertheless, the enemy is steadily inching closer to Stalingrad. He holds the west bank of the Don firmly and has succeeded in making a number of crossings in force. Some of the units reaching the east bank have been wiped out or imperilled, but others are holding their positions and receiving reinforcements.

The Russians are still able to move reinforcements to the Volga front, but they are not served by as good transportation facilities as the Germans possess in the southeastern Ukraine. It is for this reason that they appear more intent on developing their counter-offensive at Voronezh and on the Moscowfront. They evidently consider it wiser to immobilize a large part of the German strength by threatening other vital positions than to try and match the German mobility and bring greater strength than the Germans possess to the Caucasus and Volga fronts. And in this they are probably wise.

It is, however, of paramount importance that they hang on to Stalingrad for as long as possible, and there is no doubt that reserve forces are continuing to be moved from the Urals and from Turkoman to distributing points on the Caspian Sea.

These next six weeks will be very anxious weeks, not only for us, but for the enemy as well. There is little doubt now that his campaign in southwestern Russia is not going quite as he expected. He has left himself a very slim margin of time, and the most difficult part of his operation is still ahead of him.

The German offensive has only reached the foothills of the Caucasus, and, though he is adept at mountain fighting, as he proved in his Yugoslavia and Greek operations last year, he is fighting a different enemy. At no point hitherto has he penetrated very far into the caucasian foothills, and his onward rush toward the Caspian has ground to a halt around Pyatigorsk.

With so little knowledge of the Russian plans or movement of troops, it is not possible to offer a soundly reasoned estimate of Russia's chances of holding Stalingrad. But it is possible to assert that so long as Stalingrad holds, the Germans will effect no penetration of the Caucasus mountains. Already the battle for Stalingrad has taken such a heavy toll of German men and material that its eventual capture after another two or three weeks of fighting would necessitate a considerable period of reorganization before the Germans would be in condition to develop another major offensive.

GROWING AIR POWER

At the time of writing there has been no official statement concerning the battle in which a British convoy is reported to be involved off Cape St. Vincent in Portugal. The Portuguese have described a ferocious battle between British ships and enemy aircraft in this region. If such a battle took place it is not yet clear whether the British convoys represents a second installment of supplies and reinforcements for Malta, or whether it is bound for another destination. Large convoys bound for the Middle East via the Cape of Good Hope or proceeding to British West African ports do not commonly pass near the Portuguese coast. They steam well out into the Atlantic before turning south. It appears likely, therefore, that any powerfully escorted convoy of British ships moving in the vicinity of Cape St. Vincent is bound for Gibraltar, and may proceed from there to Malta.

If this were the case, however, we are likely to have heard from enemy sources that another battle had taken place in the Western Mediterranean.

The growth of Allied air strength in the Middle East is becoming a serious embarrassment to the enemy. Allied aircraft operating in the Ionian Sea damaged an enemy convoy, left a tanker sinking and shot down five of the protecting aircraft. Further efforts to interfere with British operations in Malta are being met by the newly enlarged fighter defenses, and the enemy is continuing to lose aircraft without obtaining important results.

If the Allied shipping situation appears to be improving slightly, with new construction growing steadily and losses dwindling, the same cannot be said for the enemy. A statement issued by the British ministry of information says that more than a million tons of enemy shipping has been sunk in the North Sea and English channel alone this year. More than two hundred and thirty-five enemy supply ships were destroyed or captured, and a hundred and thirty-five were damaged. These figures to not include the very considerable losses inflicted on enemy shipping in the Mediterranean.

The Allies have the advantage which the Germans do not possess of being able to subject their enemy's shipyards to continuous air attack and thus hold down the rate of new shipping construction. The loss of this shipping is a serious matter for the Axis inasmuch as the European railways system is not adequate to handle the normal requirements of a continent which no longer trades with the outside world but must exchange labor and products internally and at the same time support vast armies operating all around its rim.

When a Girl Marries

By RENE RYERSON MART

THE STORY: While her family is away at a lake resort, Enid Sharon, stenographer, has taken a furnished apartment for a secret vacation of her own. She wants some of the leisure and luxury that she misses at home, also wants to make sure of her love for Tom Driscoll, whom she has promised to marry. She has told Tom she is going out of town on a business trip. One of Enid's neighbors in the apartment is handsome young Dr. Henry Holliday. Enid tries to get acquainted, is embarrassed when, on making a call, she finds the doctor's young son in his "bachelor" quarters.

CHAPTER VII

ENID'S contempt for herself grew as she ate her solitary Sunday luncheon. The creamed chicken, and tiny golden biscuits, and iced dessert that she had prepared so carefully lost their taste in her mouth.

Trying to force herself on the attention of a married man, that was what her little plot had added up to. And that was pretty cheap, according to her standards. She shook herself. What she needed was something to do, something to absorb her time and attention. Then she wouldn't be tempted into silly attempts to interest strange men.

She stacked the dishes unwashed in the sink and tied a red silk kerchief over her head. She doubted if she could get any art supplies on Sunday, since the stationery and book shops in the neighborhood would be closed. But getting out in the fresh air and sunshine would restore some measure of her damaged self-respect.

And she was lucky. At a drug store near the school she was able to purchase a sketch book and charcoal. Armed with these prerequisites she set out for the natural ravine that edged the fashionable suburb and that had been turned into a community park.

Enid found a comfortable seat halfway up on one of the grassy banks of this hollow, and, using her knees as an easel, she began to sketch the children at play in the ravine below her. She worked busily until the fading daylight forced her to quit.

She glanced back over the sketches that she had made before she closed the book. They weren't half bad. Her fingers had suddenly acquired a new mastery. She thrilled to a fresh enthusiasm as she retraced her steps to the apartment. Maybe she might even yet make something of her art. If only she hadn't already wasted a week of her vacation.

Busy with her thoughts, she was startled as the heavy outer door of the building clanged behind her to hear the furious barking of a dog and the scream of a child. She ran up the short flight of steps that led to the first floor corridor.

The hall lights hadn't been turned on yet and she could hardly see in the dusk. Guided more by sound than sight she found the small figure crouched in the recess of her doorway. A chow dog, that Enid knew, belonged in the apartment across the hall, was loose and making excited dashes at the frightened child. She dropped her sketching materials and snatched the boy up.

"Now, now," she soothed. "It's all right. I won't let the bad dog hurt you." She bent her head to examine one bare chubby leg. The dog's teeth had grazed it and a long red scratch was swelling into a welt.

When she looked up other apartment doors along the corridor had opened and people were crowding into the hall, among them the owner of the dog, and Dr. Holliday. The latter elbowed his way quickly to Enid and the boy.

"I don't think he's hurt much," Enid told him. "The dog was only playing."

The doctor tried to take the child from Enid but he clung tightly with both arms around her neck. She could feel his small heart hammering against her.

The doctor laughed. "I guess you'll have to carry him. Bring him into my apartment, and we'll have a look at his leg."

Enid sat down in the doctor's living-room and held the child while his father swabbed some iodine on the scratch and bandaged it. The boy stopped crying to watch with pride the bandaging of his injury.

The doctor slapped him man fashion on the back and stood him on the floor. "There, now, Sonny. Fixed up as good as if you'd been to the hospital. Men don't cry about things like that."

The child laughed through his tears.

"It was mostly fright," the doctor continued, turning to smile at Enid. "My mother's to blame for his fear of dogs. She's deathly afraid of them herself, and nothing is more contagious than fear."

Enid nodded soberly. She made an unconsciously pretty picture against the red velvet of the davenport in her blue slacks with the red silk scarf tied gypsy fashion over her head.

Sudden mischief flared in Hank Holliday. "I could thank you for rescuing Sonny, or could ask you to stay for supper with us. Which would you rather?"

Enid flushed. "Oh—I don't know ..."

"That is if you haven't a previous engagement for this evening."

"No, I haven't," Enid admitted, and then hesitantly, "I'll stay."

She had the feeling that she'd stepped bang into the middle of a dream. How else account for being in Dr. Henry Holliday's kitchen slicing meat and bread for sandwiches, cutting up a crisp head of lettuce, beating up a quick mayonnaise?"

"You're a handy thing in a kitchen," the doctor said admiringly. "I'm supposed to be the host and you're doing all the work."

A smile tucked in the corner of Enid's mouth, as she remembered the manner in which he had at first tempted to slice the cold meat. All the more ridiculous when his hands had been so deft in bandaging the baby's leg a moment before. "You were so slow about it," she explained.

"I'm not a very good housewife," he conceded, grinning.

A flicker of uneasiness cut across Enid's consciousness. After all he was a married man. Wouldn't she look silly making herself at home in the kitchen if his wife walked in now? A sudden restraint changed her manner.

"Everything's ready now. You can carry it into the dining room." She whipped off the apron she had tied across her slacks and got out of the kitchen as quickly as if she had been caught in a felony.

They were seated at the table in the gay dining room with its colorful Mexican furnishings and decorations when the doorbell rang. Enid's heart jumped into her throat. Maybe that was his wife. How silly, she thought the next moment. His wife wouldn't ring the bell, she'd just walk in.

Then she heard the janitor talking to Dr. Holliday. "Here's some things the young lady dropped in the hall."

"I'll take care of them, the doctor said. He came back to the table with her sketch book in his hands. "I forgot all about it," Enid said.

The doctor propped the sketch book beside his plate and glanced through it curiously. "Did you do these today?" he asked with interest.

Enid nodded.

"Um—some of them are pretty good. You catch expressions—now this boy on a bike. . . Say, how about doing a few sketches of Sonny?"

Enid was pleased at his praise. Her eyes began to shine. "You mean—now?"

The doctor glanced at his wristwatch. "No, not tonight. He's late for bed now. I'll have to be getting him home. Maybe next Sunday."

Enid realized that her mouth had fallen open. She closed it slowly. There was, then, a very obvious explanation of the fact that Dr. Henry Holiday lived in a bachelor apartment and was the father of a 3-year-old boy.

The opening lead helped by killing East's queen of clubs, South immediately led a club, finessed the 10-spot, then cashed the ace.

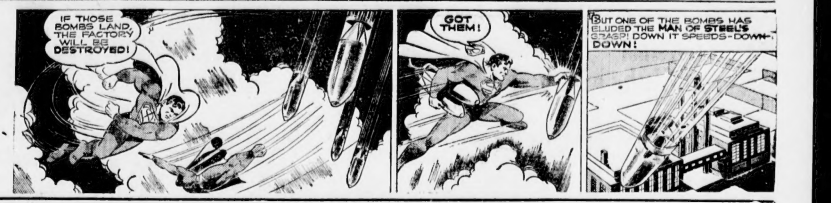

A trump lead went to the ace, and West exited with a trump. Dummy had a third round of trumps, then led a low diamond. When East played low, South played the eight and West was in with the nine.

West, arguing that "East ought to hold something," tried a spade lead. After making his queen, South led the queen of diamonds, as he felt sure that West held the king, and East's jack might be blank.

West's opening lead was a mistake. With a hand of this general strength, stoppers in each suit but no sequences, he ought to have opened trumps, leading the ace and deuce. He has every interest in reducing the play to no trumps as quickly as possible. And this is the type of hand on which the general strength should not be jeopardized by leading away from any plain suit honor card.

Voters Warned Get Names on Election List

Electors whose names are not on the voters' list Sept. 22, provincial by-election day, will not be permitted to cast ballots, H. H. Crawford, returning officer, said Wednesday.

Under the Alberta Election Act there will be no swearing-in of voters election day. The names of all those eligible to vote must appear on the voters' list which is now being prepared by enumerators.

The list will be posted and those whose names do not appear on it must make application to the returning officer when revisions are made just before the election.

GET NAMES ON NOW

In order to avoid bother, electors should see that their names are on the list when enumerators make the house-to-house canvass which started this week.

Advance polls for the election will open Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 17, 18 and 19, from 2 to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m. each day. Location of the advance polls will be announced later.

Location of the 142 polls for the election will be announced next week.

Approximately 300 ballot boxes will be required for the vote, Robert A. Andison, chief electoral officer, reported Tuesday. Election supplies and instructions for deputy returning officers are now being prepared.

Liberals to Nominate at Empire Meet

The nominating convention to select a Liberal party candidate to contest the forthcoming provincial by-election will be held at the Empire theatre Thursday, Sept. 3, instead of the Masonic Temple, as originally decided, it was announced Wednesday by Charles H. Grant, K.C., secretary of the Edmonton Provincial Liberal Association.

Mr. Grant explained that the change in venue is due to the fact that the maximum number of delegates who will be eligible to vote for a candidate at the convention is 851, and that the theatre will provide more adequate accommodation.

Primaries at which convention delegates and their alternates will be named will be held

Locations where primaries will be held will be announced shortly, Mr. Grant stated.
